Introduction

Welcome to The Umbrella Chronicles

The outbreak occurred in the summer of 1998. It started in the American Midwestern town of Raccoon City and brought hell to earth. The T-virus was developed as a biological weapon. Proliferating amongst the unsuspecting public, it metamorphosed them into living dead—Zombies. Umbrella's mission statement had always been about preserving the health of the people, but beneath this bright statement lurked the shadow of Ozwell E. Spencer's ambition. The truth behind the rise and fall of Umbrella is something to which only a select few are privy. The beginning of the end started on the outskirts of Raccoon City in the Arklay Mountains—

Resident Evil: The Umbrella Chronicles allows the player to experience the events that occurred in Resident Evil 0, Resident Evil, Resident Evil 2, and Resident Evil 3: Nemesis in a new way. The first-person point of view allows you to step into the shoes of several well-known characters and experience the familiar events from their unique perspectives. You'll gain a deeper understanding of the many forces that shaped and guided Umbrella's growth, and the one force that brought it to its knees. Questions will be answered, motives revealed, and true faces uncovered. So forget what you think you know, and what you wish were true, and enjoy a new spin on the original and ground-breaking chapters in the Resident Evil saga.

The Resident Evil Experience

We know that many of you reading this guide are, like us, avid and rabid Resident Evil fans. You remember the first time you met a Cerberus as it came crashing into a darkened hallway, along with the cacophony of shattered glass and lightning that announced its arrival. You remember limping along, life gauge flashing red, hoping to the gaming gods that you'd encounter a green herb before meeting another Zombie. You remember that once it was over, there were plenty of reasons to play through again.

After a few more games, the characters became just as detailed, and their motivations just as complicated as the intricate traps and puzzles that populate each new installment. And the threadbare plot of secret experiments gone awry soon became an intricately woven tapestry of espionage, betrayal, secret alliances, and false fronts. It became difficult to keep up and to keep straight.

On the other hand, we also know that the Wii's groundbreaking mechanics, coupled with The Umbrella Chronicles' fast and fun gameplay, will introduce many new fans to the wonderful world of survival horror that Capcom created, and continues to populate, with deeper and deeper storylines. And while it's very tempting to play through the game simply enjoying the action while ignoring all else, we urge to you to get involved. Get to know the characters: the good, the bad, and the ugly; the self-motivated and the selfless; the power-hungry and the mad. We promise that if you do, your gameplay experience will be enriched immensely, and you'll be begging to know what happens next.

It's in the dark places that true motives hide and secrets thrive. And it's in the failing light that evil truly resides. So it falls to us, then, to be both a guide and a light. To both assist and illuminate. This book was created with that twofold mission in mind. Within is printed not only what you need to survive, but what you need to truly understand. A warning, however: The deeper you dig, the uglier the things you uncover. It isn't called Resident Evil for nothing. Regardless, knowledge is indeed power, so now we pass the knowledge on to you. Use it well, and you just might make it through the night.

What's in the Book?

Basic Training: The key to survival is preparation, so start with this chapter to learn everything you need to know to live through the oncoming nightmare. From starting a new game and navigating the pre-mission menus to equipment management and combat training, it's a must-read survival guide.

Intelligence Training: Know your friends, know your foes, and know how to tell the difference! This section includes dossiers on all playable characters, including members of the S.T.A.R.S. team, hired guns from Umbrella, and even those that are officially, if not technically, deceased.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

The Infected: Whoever coined the phrase "Keep your friends close and your enemies closer" certainly didn't face adversaries like these. Resident Evil: The Umbrella Chronicles may differ in many ways from its predecessors, but one fact remains absolutely constant throughout the series: You must know your enemies' weaknesses or else fall victim to their strengths. This chapter will train you in how to put each hostile down and make sure it stays there.

Weapons Training: You wouldn't use a hammer to pound a tack, would you? Well, neither should you use a Magnum to fell a Leech. Selecting the right tool for the job is imperative, else you'll be left with only a pistol when what you really need is a rocket.

Surviving the Game: After preparation and training comes execution. This chapter walks you through each scenario, highlighting important items, weapons, and enemy locations, as well as tips and tactics to help you through the most difficult encounters. In the heat of battle, a glance may be all you can afford, so we've done our best to make this section clear and concise, detailing only what you need to know to survive.

Authorized Personnel Only: This wouldn't be Resident Evil without hidden levels, secret upgrades, alternate routes, and anything else that would compel you to play again, again, and again! Flip through this chapter to get the lowdown on how to unlock it all (retinal scan not required).

The File Room: Would you rather use those game-worn and weary eyes to contemplate which weapon to upgrade next, or to read, onscreen, through all of those files you've accumulated? Never fear; the complete text of every scrap of paper you've uncovered is included here. All of it is organized and sorted to provide any researcher easy access to the most frequently asked questions. After all, a little light reading before bed never hurts. Sweet dreams!

Basic Training

Welcome to basic training. This chapter contains everything you need to know to get up and playing, as well as what to expect in-game. From starting a new game to understanding the ranking system, the information contained here is vital to your survival in the infested hallways, highways, byways, and stairways that await you.

Getting Started

Starting/Loading a Game

The title screen prompts you to press any button to begin. Do so and you're taken to the load game screen.

If you wish to load a previously saved game, select one of the three available save files to begin.

Aim the Wii Remote at your screen and press B to make a selection.

If this is your first time playing, select New Game. You'll then be prompted to select a save file. Empty files are denoted by a No Data text box. Select one to create a new save file. Be aware that you can have only three save files, so to save a fourth game, you'll have to overwrite an existing file.

Finally, select a difficulty level and your save file is complete. You'll proceed to the scenario select screen.

Scenario Select/Main Menu

The scenario select screen/main menu allows you to select one of the four main scenarios to play. If this is a new game, the only choice you have is "Train Derailment." As you progress through the game, new scenarios become available.

Before selecting a scenario, let's explore the four tabs located at the top of the screen—you'll visit these often throughout your adventure.

If this is a new save file, only the options tab is selectable. Once you finish a chapter, the other tabs become available.

Results: The results tab shows various stats that relate to your overall efficiency in playing through each chapter in a scenario. The separate stats are then combined to give you an overall ranking.

More on how rankings are determined is included in the "Rankings" section at the end of this chapter, along with what repercussions rankings have on your experience.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Customize: The customize menu allows you to upgrade the various weapons you find throughout the game.

Archives: The archives contain every file and souvenir that you've found or earned while playing the game. Feel like learning more about the events you are experiencing? This is the place.

The options screen contains four submenus:

- Audio Setup: Select this to configure the volume settings.
- Screen Setup: Select this to adjust the brightness and to turn subtitles on or off.

TIP

If you find the in-game environments too dark, adjust the brightness level to compensate.

NOTE

"The File Room" chapter contains transcriptions of all the files found in the game, just in case you prefer print over onscreen text.

Options: Selecting the options tab opens up an options menu, which allows you to configure various aspects of the game.

- Controller Setup: Select this option to configure various controller settings, including inverting the Y-axis and changing the key configuration. There are three key configurations, including one designed for the Zapper peripheral.

NOTE

If you are playing a two-player game, the three camera options allow you to select who controls the camera: Player 1, Player 2, or both.

- Game Setup: This tab allows you to change the difficulty setting and to reset the game. Resetting the game takes you to the title screen.

CAUTION

Reset the game when you want to choose another save file or create a new save file. Be aware that resetting causes all unsaved data to be lost.

Chapter/Subchapter Select

Once you select a scenario, you're taken to the chapter select screen. Each scenario contains three chapters, for a total of 12 levels. Complete one chapter and, generally, the next becomes available. Select the chapter you wish to play and you'll be taken to the character select screen.

Each set of chapters also contains two or more subchapters. These are unlocked in various ways, from simply completing a prerequisite level to earning a certain ranking on one or more levels.

Check out the "Authorized Personnel Only" chapter to learn more about unlocking every subchapter.

Subchapters provide an opportunity to experience the events of the main scenario from the perspective of different characters. For example, the "Nightmare" subchapters tell the story of how Rebecca and Richard made it to the mansion.

Character Selection

The character select screen allows you to choose the character you'd like to play within the level. There are two selectable characters per chapter. This allows each player in a co-op game to choose a different persona. In a solo game, the selection has minimal impact on the game.

Equipment Selection

Once you select a character, you are taken to the equipment selection screen. Here you choose which secondary weapon to begin the level with. Weapons appear on the list once you discover them. The numerical values overlapping the weapon icons refer to the amount of ammunition you currently have for each weapon.

An "E" in the ammo count area of the weapon thumbnail designates the weapon as your equipped weapon.

The choice of a secondary weapon is important to your survival. Before choosing, weigh such factors as weapon strengths and weaknesses, enemy types and numbers, and availability of ammo within the level. Check out the "Weapons Training" chapter for more information on each weapon.

Once you select your secondary weapon, you're ready to begin the level.

Each character has a default sidearm that comes with unlimited ammo. The appearance and the names of the sidearms differ between characters, but the stats are the same.

Controller Setup

This section details the default controller setup. To change the default layout, select options and then controller setup from the scenario select screen.

The In-Game Environment

The Game Screen

The display in the upper-left corner of the game screen shows the name of the selected character, the current weapon, the amount of ammo remaining, the number of grenades remaining, and the character's health gauge.

The health gauge begins green but changes to yellow and then to red as you take damage. Find an herb to regain health before your life gauge runs out completely.

The targeting reticle is more than just a visual aid to help guide your aim. It also depicts the amount of ammo left in your clip. There is no automatic reload, so pay attention to the display and shake the Wii Remote to reload when necessary.

When your clip is nearly empty, the targeting reticle begins to blink, signaling the need to reload.

In addition to the blinking that represents low ammo, the targeting reticle has three appearances:

- No Target: When no enemy or breakable object is targeted, only the red targeting dot is visible.
- Target Acquired: White crosshairs appear when the reticle is positioned over an enemy or a breakable object.
- Weak Spot: The crosshairs disappear and the red center dot begins blinking when the reticle is positioned over an enemy's weak spot. If your aim is steady and your timing true, you'll score a critical hit on the enemy.

Critical hits do massive damage to an enemy, resulting in a bloody mess.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Weapon/Item Usage

There is no inventory management required in Resident Evil: The Umbrella Chronicles. The items and weapons found in-game are either accessed directly from the game screen, consumed on use, or, in the case of files, automatically placed in the archive. Here is a list of all types of available pickups and how they are used:

Weapons/Ammo: Once picked up, all weapons are automatically placed in a queue and can be accessed by pressing ✣ up or down, or by pressing Ⓒ. Weapons come with a specified amount of ammo. If you pick up a weapon that you already have in your queue, only the ammo is added.

Herbs: Picking up herbs automatically heals a significant portion of damage. You cannot store herbs, so only pick them up when you have sustained damage.

Picking up an herb while at full health wastes the herb. Instead, leave it until you need it (especially during boss battles).

First-aid Spray: The most useful item in the game! First-aid spray is stored until your life gauge drops to zero, at which time it fully heals all damage. Make finding these a top priority.

The "Surviving the Game" chapter includes the locations of every item in the game. Before starting a level, refer to the appropriate map and make a note of the first-aid spray location.

Files: Files are scattered throughout each level. They are hidden within breakable objects, so finding them is sometimes difficult. Once found, they are automatically placed in the archive. The archive can be accessed from the scenario select screen.

Not only do files contain important event, character, and story information, but the percentage of files you find is one factor in determining your completion ranking. See the "Ranking" section at the end of this chapter for more detail.

The Environment

Firing at red barrels results in an explosion that damages nearby enemies.

The first thing you'll notice while playing the game is just how much of the environment can be destroyed: tables, chairs, lamps, cars, paintings, etc. This is not simply an aesthetic choice or a "cool" gameplay feature—it is absolutely required for four reasons:

1. Destroying objects can reveal hidden items.
2. The number of items you destroy is used in calculating your chapter and overall scenario ranking.
3. Destroying certain objects indirectly aids in the defeat of enemies.
4. Destroying certain doors reveals alternate paths or secret rooms!

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Actions

The maps in the "Surviving the Game" chapter include every secret room and alternate path.

Firing at this overhead monitor causes it to fall and crush the Zombies beneath.

Destroying light sources is a good way to find hidden items, but it's also a sure way to cloak the immediate area in darkness and thus provide enemies more cover.

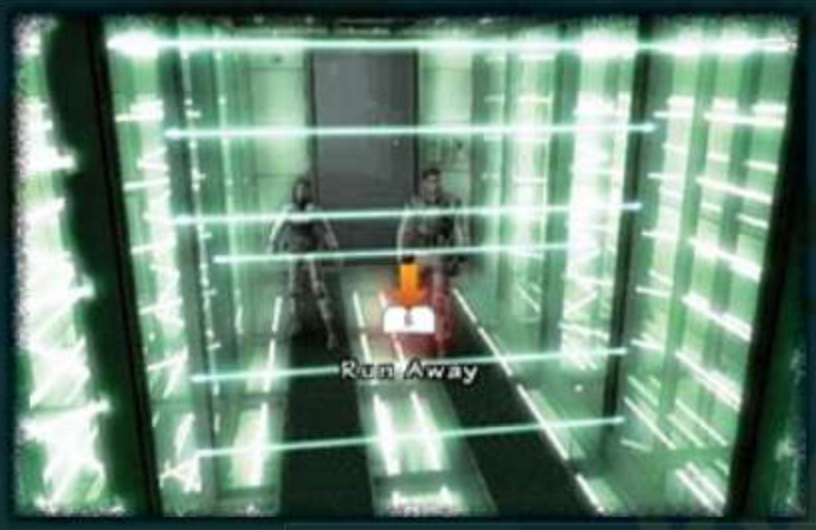
Throughout the game you'll be expected to quickly and accurately perform certain controller manipulations. Failure results in taking damage or even instant death.

Counter-attacks are the most common action. When grabbed by a Zombie, rapidly shake the Wii Remote to escape. Fail to do so in a timely manner and you'll sustain damage.

Events are another type of action. Events require deft manipulation of the Wii Remote in order to escape. Unlike counterattacks, which always require shaking the remote, events switch up the required action. You may be prompted to tap Ⓐ repeatedly, press Ⓑ once, or press Ⓐ and Ⓑ simultaneously. Whatever action is called for by the onscreen prompt, do it quickly to avoid damage or death.

Events are usually preceded by a cutscene that sets up the action.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.



Tapping Ⓑ here allows Jill and Chris to escape the laser trap unharmed.

Dying

Two things are guaranteed in a Resident Evil game, regardless of the platform or perspective: death and… death. When you die, you're given the opportunity to continue. If you've passed a checkpoint, you begin there. If you haven't you restart at the beginning of the level.

Not only does reaching a checkpoint allow you to continue from that point, but also it provides you with important information. The time elapsed, enemy hits, critical hits, and objects destroyed are listed. All of these factor in to your end-of-chapter ranking.

There is one checkpoint per level, and it's generally located near the midpoint.

Resident Evil: The Umbrella Chronicles utilizes an auto-save feature, so there is no need to manually save a game. The game is saved automatically at various points: upon completion of a level, when changes are made to the various options, when a weapon is upgraded, etc.

Should you wish to restart a level or reset the game and return to the title screen, press ② and make the appropriate selection.

Resetting a game in the middle of a level causes all current game data to be lost.

Ranking

After you complete a chapter, you're assigned a ranking that reflects your efficiency at completing the level. The possible rankings, in descending order, are: "S," "A," "B," and "C."

Achieving a certain ranking is required to unlock some of the hidden content in the game. Also, the higher the ranking, the more stars you gain (stars are used to purchase upgrades for the weapons you find).

You are ranked individually in five different areas. The average of those five rankings is your overall chapter ranking. The five areas are: clear time, enemy hits, critical hits, objects destroyed, and files found.

Check out the "Authorized Personnel Only" chapter to see exactly what you need to achieve each ranking.

Playable Characters

This chapter presents the profiles of each of the playable characters in the game. Since you'll be walking, running, fighting, and dying in their shoes, you'd best get to know them first!

NOTE

"The File Room" chapter contains profiles on every main and ancillary character mentioned throughout the game. Check them out for a deeper understanding of the motivations and desires that drive each player in the conflict.

Train Derailment

The first scenario chronicles the original outbreak of the T-virus in the Arklay Mountains (as portrayed in R*esident Evil 0*). Rebecca Chambers, a S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team member, forms an unlikely alliance with a convicted felon who was en route to his own execution before his convoy ran into some unexpected trouble. Like many of the characters that make up this drama, Billy Coen is not who he appears.

Rebecca Chambers

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team, Rebecca is an expert in the manufacture and preparation of pharmaceuticals and serves as the team's medic. She is highly talented and graduated college at the young age of 18. Although she looks delicate, she is a woman of action and calm in the face of danger. She lacks experience in actual combat, so she can appear childish at times and can sometimes hesitate when finding herself overwhelmed by an unknown situation.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Billy Coen

Originally a second lieutenant in the U.S.M.C., Billy Coen was sentenced to death for first-degree murder for his role in the deaths of 23 people. Billy is perceptive and can expertly handle any weapon. His body, hardened by Marine training, is a match for any monster in battle. He is a cynical man of few words, but he possesses a keen sense of justice and a deep passion for his duty.

The Mansion Incident

The second scenario chronicles the events portrayed in the original Resident Evil. The S.T.A.R.S. Alpha Team is sent into the Arklay Mountains to locate and rescue members of the missing Bravo Team. Shortly after landing they are attacked by mutated dogs and forced to take refuge in a nearby mansion.

Jill Valentine

Alpha Team's Jill Valentine is very dexterous and is an expert at picking locks, earning her the somewhat awkward title of "Master of Unlocking." She is not only highly skilled in bomb disposal, but is excellent at breaking down any situation and determining the best course of action. Her years of U.S. Army Delta Force training have helped make her a crack shot.

After the destruction of Raccoon City, both she and Chris have joined a private biohazard containment unit with the goal of taking Umbrella down once and for all. Serious, with a strong sense of justice, she's very direct in her actions. She typically shows only her tough side to others, but there are times when she lets her guard down and shows a softer side.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Chris Redfield

Chris Redfield is a member of the S.T.A.R.S. Alpha Team. His marksmanship is #1 amongst the sharpshooters assembled in Alpha. He was once a pilot in the U.S.A.F. and has been rigorously trained in hand-to-hand as well as knife combat. He has pursued Umbrella and the people behind it even after the fall of Raccoon City by helping to organize a private biohazard containment unit.

An excellent observer with keen insight, his sense of right and wrong is unwavering. This is often a source of conflict between Chris and his superiors. He has a younger sister, Claire, of whom he is very protective.

Raccoon's Destruction

The outbreak that began in the Arklay Mountains rapidly spreads to nearby Raccoon City. The inhabitants are quick to fall victim to the highly infectious virus and soon begin feeding on the uninfected. As the survivors fight to escape, a plan is set in motion to contain the virus once and for all. Once again, Jill Valentine is swept up in the chain of events, but this time, help arrives from the very organization that caused the outbreak.

Carlos Oliveira

A young mercenary with Native American blood in his veins, Carlos Oliveira was active in antigovernment guerilla operations in South America. After government forces wiped out his organization, he was scouted by Umbrella Corporation to join their U.B.C.S. special ops unit. He is an expert in heavy weaponry and vehicle operation, making him a valuable asset. He is warm-hearted and is known to joke around. Perhaps as a result of being raised amidst violence, he is brave and always willing to throw himself in the middle of danger.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Umbrella's End

Chris Redfield and Jill Valentine team up again, but this time they are part of a bio-weapon containment team whose mission is to put an end to Umbrella's horrific experiments once and for all. Their destination is an Umbrella base located somewhere in southern Russia.

Subchapters

Various subchapters allow you to play as characters with somewhat looser affiliations than those of the main story arc. Being bad feels so good!

Albert Wesker

One of the men behind the biohazard outbreak, and always seen with his signature shades on, Albert Wesker possesses knowledge about biological engineering and used to be an agent for Umbrella. He was planted in S.T.A.R.S. to spy on the agents and was even made their commanding officer.

Wesker took particular note of Chris and his combat prowess while in charge of the team. He is cold-blooded and has no qualms about betraying the people who place their faith in him. He betrayed and killed Marcus, lured the S.T.A.R.S. teams into the mansion and nearly wiped them out, and even pretended to be dead to join Umbrella's rival company.

Wesker was the one who sent Ada Wong to retrieve the G-virus and was involved in the incidents at Rockfort Island. He appears intent on gathering as much data as possible on viral weaponry. Since injecting himself with a virus during the events at the mansion, his power has grown far beyond that of a normal human being.

Ada Wong

Ada Wong is a woman shrouded in mystery. She tells Leon that she has come to Raccoon City looking for her lover, but this is only cover. She is actually a spy who has come to retrieve a sample of the G-virus. She has undergone rigorous special training in firearms and acrobatics, making her a real pro. Ada is always calm and collected even in the most extreme circumstances.

She is cold and mysterious, but can show a feminine side from time to time. Whether she truly cares about anyone else or is just using her charms to manipulate people is never clear. Who is the real Ada Wong? Nobody knows.

HUNK

HUNK has carried out a large number of successful operations, many of which he was the only one to return alive from, earning him the nickname "Grim Reaper." He is a member of Umbrella special forces and was the operative that single-handedly retrieved the G-virus despite the rest of his unit being wiped out by the G creature that used to be William Birkin. Cold, silent, and devoid of emotion, he is a human machine. He has never shown his true nature, and even his true face is unknown.

The Infected

What follows is a breakdown of each enemy you encounter in the game. After you read this chapter, you'll be able to identify and efficiently terminate every creature, mutant, and biological experiment gone awry that Umbrella throws at you.

Non-Boss Encounters

Background: This small, venomous snake was secondarily infected by the T-virus.

Attacks: Its only attack is a leaping fang-strike.

Tactics: Adders move quickly, and their small size makes them difficult targets to hit. However, one shot from the weakest weapon will do the job.

Background: The Bat has been secondarily infected with the T-virus, giving it heightened aggressiveness.

Attacks: Its only attack is a bite. However, they usually attack in numbers.

Tactics: Save ammo by using your knife to dispose of the winged rodents.

Background: A disposed-of Web Spinner mutated and grew even larger and more deadly.

Attacks: In addition to a melee attack, the Black Tiger spits venom at its prey.

Tactics: Black Tigers are slow-moving and weak. However, they make up for their weakness with the ability to cling to and climb walls. They have a tendency to drop in unexpectedly, so be ready in areas they inhabit.

Target the head with whatever weapon is handy. The venom they spit can be dispersed in midair with a carefully placed round.

Background: The Cerberus is a B.O.W. created by administering the T-virus to large, military-trained Dobermans.

Attacks: Cerberus's bite is far worse than its bark. Once it gets close to its prey, it'll leap through the air, making a clean shot difficult to pull off.

Tactics: The trick is to be quicker than the mutated dog. In packs, that generally means equipping a shotgun—the blast will knock multiple targets back.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Chimera

Background: This grotesque B.O.W. was created by combining the genes of a human being with those of a fly.

Attacks: Chimeras attack with their elongated pincers.

Tactics: The ability to climb walls coupled with their speed makes them tough opponents. The submachine gun makes a perfect mutant flyswatter.

Crow

Background: Crows are wild birds that were infected by the T-virus.

Attacks: They dive at their prey and let their sharp beaks do the rest.

Tactics: A knife swing is the most efficient way to combat these winged disease-carriers. Or let the feathers fly with a handgun round.

Crimson Head

Background: The Crimson Head is a Zombie that has undergone a sudden mutation, bringing with it a ferociousness surpassing that of a standard Zombie.

Attacks: Crimson Heads are fast—really fast—and their long talons inflict serious damage.

Tactics: Add to their quickness more resilience than the average Zombie and you have your hands full. Don't stop firing until they stop twitching.

Eliminator

Background: The Eliminator is a biological weapon created from a large monkey.

Attacks: Eliminators are agile and can sidestep attacks with ease. They can also leap long distances, finishing the jump with a midair claw attack.

Tactics: Their agility makes it tough to keep them in your sights. Utilize the shotgun's forgiving blast radius and hit them before they leap in the air. Also, they have a tendency to sneak below your field of vision, so use the control stick to adjust your sights accordingly.

BIOHAZARD

primagames.com

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Hunter

Background: The Hunter is a battle B.O.W. born from a fertilized human egg infused with reptilian DNA with the assistance of the T-virus.

Attacks: Hunters are in the same class as Eliminators with regards to their strength and agility. They can leap long distances, and their sharp claws inflict severe damage.

Tactics: Hunters generally attack in packs, so equip a shotgun to keep them at barrel's length.

Large Roach

Background: These were normal cockroaches that lived in the sewers until becoming infected with the T-virus and growing to 40 centimeters, or eight times their normal size.

Attacks: Like Bats and Leeches, Large Roaches attempt to bite at the face of their prey.

Tactics: Use a knife to ensure they don't live through this apocalypse or any other.

Ivy

Background: Officially named Plant 43, this B.O.W. was developed by analyzing data from the Plant 42 that had appeared in the mansion.

Attacks: Ivy can lash out with its long and sharp appendages as well as spit digestive enzymes at prey.

Tactics: These vines are extremely slow and only pose a threat if they are backing up other attackers. This is due to their spit attack. Take out their discharge in midair before targeting their flower-like heads.

Leech

Background: This bloodsucking Leech is approximately 20 centimeters in length. Bred by Dr. Marcus, this creature has evolved in ways previously unthinkable in an annelid.

Attacks: The Leech will attach itself to its victim's face to inflict damage. If many of them are present, they can coalesce into a humanoid form. This form employs a highly damaging lash attack against its foes.

Tactics: Once a Leech attaches itself to your face there is a short delay before damage is dealt. Quickly swing your knife to rid yourself of the bloodsuckers. If they form into a humanoid, it'll take a few shotgun rounds or several submachine-gun rounds to destroy it.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Licker

Background: These creatures used to be Zombies before the T-virus further ravaged their bodies.

Attacks: Lickers employ their elongated, barbed tongue to attack from a distance. Up close, they use their claws.

Tactics: Having both a ranged and a melee attack makes Lickers tough opponents, especially when faced in groups. Utilize the submachine gun's range and fast rate of fire to dispose of targets near and far.

Wasp

Background: These Wasps were secondarily infected after ingesting insect carriers of the T-virus. They have grown to enormous size as a result.

Attacks: Wasps have a sting attack.

Tactics: Wasps hesitate before they attack, giving you time to hit them from afar. Once they start rushing in, swing your knife to knock them out of the air.

Neptune

Background: Neptune is a new form of B.O.W. created from a great white Shark base. It was developed as an experiment to prove that the T-virus would combine well with sea creatures.

Attacks: Neptunes have a bite attack.

Tactics: Fire at their open mouths as they swim toward you. Don't waste ammo trying to fire at them when they are submerged.

Web Spinner

Background: The Web Spinner is a new B.O.W. developed from early experiments with arthropods.

Attacks: The Web Spinner spits acidic venom.

Tactics: Web Spinners are big and slow, making them easy targets. Their airborne venom can be shot down with a well-placed round or shell.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Zombie

Background: Zombies were once human, but they were infected with and consequently resurrected by the T-virus. They lose their ability to reason, which, combined with the continued decay of their flesh, has led to their being called Zombies.

Attacks: Zombies bite and claw their prey.

Tactics: Zombies rely on superior numbers to overwhelm their victims. They are slow-moving but quick when attacking. Your sidearm will suffice against a few, but if they attack in force, equip a shotgun or submachine gun. Also, hitting a Zombie in the leg causes it to fall to its knees, delaying its approach.

Bosses

Refer to the "Surviving the Game" chapter for detailed tactics on successfully and efficiently defeating every boss.

Grave Digger

Background: The Grave Digger is an arthropod that has mutated to an enormous size as a side effect from the T-virus.

Infected Bat

Background: The Infected Bat is a creature that shows distinct mutations over other Bats. It is a prime example of the T-virus increasing the size of a highly compatible mammal.

Ivan

Background: Ivan is a derivation of the T-103 Tyrant line that Sergei has re-engineered to act as his personal bodyguard.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Lisa Trevor

Background: Lisa was imprisoned for nearly 30 years in the mansion and subjected to continual experiments that transfigured her into a monster.

Plant 42

Background: Plant 42 was created accidentally during the T-virus outbreak.

Mimicry Marcus

Background: This creature is actually composed of countless Leeches that have merged together to imitate the late Dr. James Marcus.

Queen Leech

Background: This creature has mutated to become the Queen Leech that controls all leeches. It typically takes the form of Dr. James Marcus.

Nemesis T-Type (Pursuer)

Background: This B.O.W. is the result of combining a Nemesis parasite with a host Tyrant body.

Sergei Monster (Boss)

Background: Sergei transformed into this monster after injecting himself with a virus.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Stinger

Background: The Stinger is a B.O.W. created by administering the T-virus to a scorpion.

Yawn

Background: This poisonous snake, bred for use as a B.O.W. test subject, escaped and was subsequently infected with the T-virus, causing it to grow to a gigantic size.

Talos

Background: Codename T-A.L.O.S. The "T" stands for Tyrant and the rest of the codename stands for Armored Lethal Organic System. This bio-weapon uses a Tyrant as a base, while adding remote computer-control capabilities via a chip implanted in the brain.

Tyrant (T-002)

Background: The Tyrant is a product of the Arklay Research Facility—the ultimate life-form, based on the male human body structure.

Weapons Training

Guns, guns, guns! From the knife to the hand cannon and every shotgun, submachine gun, Magnum, grenade, and rocket launcher in between, this chapter gives you all the background you need to effectively wield every weapon in the game.

Default Weapons

Every character is equipped with a pistol and a knife, and grenades are relatively plentiful. The pistol is weak, but it sports unlimited ammunition, making it the go-to weapon when facing slow-moving or distant enemies.

Although every playable character's pistol has a unique name and look, the stats are equal across the board.

Resist the temptation to keep the pistol equipped while making your way through a level. Many enemies will sneak up on you, and if you are forced to switch weapons before firing, you'll definitely take damage. Rather, keep a submachine gun or shotgun equipped and then switch to the pistol when the situation allows.

A group of Zombies can be taken out with a pistol if you're trying to conserve ammo. Aim for the Zombie's leg and bring it to its knees. Then, put a few bullets in its brainpan to finish it off. Rinse and repeat until all are eliminated.

The knife is extremely handy when dealing with smaller creatures like Bats, Wasps, Leeches, Crows, and Large Roaches. A single swipe is all it takes to fell them, and if they attack in numbers simply keep swinging until the onslaught ends.

Use caution when fighting the humanoid form of the Leech. Relying on your knife to eliminate the small Leeches they throw off will cloud your vision, allowing the humanoid to reach striking distance. Instead, equip a shotgun and fire at the humanoid. Any Leeches attached to you will be destroyed when the humanoid is.

Grenades are great for crowd control, so save them for when you get overwhelmed. You should be able to handle two or three enemies without breaking a sweat, but for four or more consider pulling the pin!

Looking for that hidden file or weapon? Then the grenade is the answer. It will destroy every breakable object within a limited range.

Upgrading Weapons

To upgrade weapons, select the customize tab on the scenario select screen. Once there, select the weapon you'd like to upgrade and then spend the required amount of stars.

Stars are earned by completing levels. The higher your ranking, the more stars you are awarded. You get four stars for an "S" ranking, three for an "A," and so on.

All weapons are upgraded in a linear fashion. Level two increases ammo, level three increases capacity (clip size), level four increases power, and level five unlocks infinite ammo. All upgrade costs are not equal. Generally, the better the weapon, the more it costs to upgrade. The following section lists all upgrades and upgrade costs for each weapon.

To begin unlocking infinite ammo, you must first upgrade all weapons to level four.

Shotguns

Shotguns are remarkable close-range weapons. Not only are they capable of damaging multiple enemies with each shot, but enemies that are hit are usually forced backward by the concussive force of the blast. Further, a point-blank and accurate hit will drop most enemies with a single shell.

Shotguns have two big weaknesses, though. The first is their limited range. The buckshot expelled from the muzzle spreads quickly and therefore does considerably less damage the farther it travels. The second weakness is the relatively slow reload time when compared to other weapons. Get caught reloading in the middle of a battle and you're sure to take damage.

Assault Shotgun

First Acquired: Nightmare 1

Despite slow reload times and limited ammo capacity, this gun packs a punch.

Submachine Guns

Submachine guns are the antithesis of shotguns. They lack the punch and crowd-control capabilities of the shotgun and eat through ammo like a starving Zombie at a brain buffet. However, they are as accurate up close as they are at a distance, making them the perfect weapon for picking enemies off at range. Further, they have the fastest reload speed in the game, allowing for near nonstop fire.

Because of their high ammo consumption, effective use of a submachine gun is paramount to your survival. Submachine guns offer three firing modes: Tap B once to fire a single shot, hold B briefly to fire a burst of rounds, and hold down B to enter fully automatic mode. The versatility makes it a great all-around choice for a secondary weapon.

The single-fire capability of the submachine gun makes it ideal for pulling off critical hits.

Automatic Pistol

First Acquired: Umbrella's End 2

The automatic pistol's large ammo capacity combined with rapid-fire ability lays waste to enemies.

Automatic Pistol

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5

Grenade Launchers

Grenade launchers are the ultimate crowd-control weapon. They provide much more power and a bigger blast radius than the shotgun, but they do have drawbacks.

First, they aren't very versatile as a secondary weapon. Sure, they can blast a group of enemies to pulp, but they are overkill against two or three—especially given the scarcity of ammo. Further, they lob grenades, rather than fire them with velocity. So if accuracy is what you're after, a rocket launcher or a Magnum is a better choice. Finally, although their capacity is comparable to that of the other big guns, their reload speed is slow.

In the end, it's best to choose a more versatile secondary weapon and leave the grenade launcher behind. Besides, your arm makes a great hand-grenade launcher!

Grenade Launcher

First Acquired: Rebirth 2

A wide range of destruction makes it perfect for clearing out groups.

Grenade Launcher

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	3	6	6	6	Infinite
Capacity	1	1	2	2	2
Power	A	A	A	S	S
Cost	—	5	6	7	—
Total Cost	—	5	11	18	—

Grenade Launcher HP

First Acquired: Death's Door

The HP has a smaller blast radius than other launchers but deals serious damage.

Grenade Launcher HP

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	12	24	24	24	Infinite
Capacity	4	4	8	8	8

Cost	—	4	5	6	—
Total Cost	—	4	9	15	—

Grenade Launcher AT

First Acquired: Train Derailment 3

The grenade launcher AT fires hand grenades with a large blast radius. It's good for crowd control.

Grenade Launcher AT

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	18	36	36	36	Infinite
Capacity	6	6	12	12	12

Magnums

Magnums are incredibly devastating handguns, the most powerful of which will cut down most enemies with a single round. The velocity of the round is so great that it can travel through multiple enemies, doing damage to each. Reload speed is also fast, second only to the submachine gun. More importantly, they make great boss killers as well, but make every shot count because ammo is relatively scarce.

Overall, the Magnum is a very good choice for a secondary weapon, once it becomes available. Until then, take an upgraded shotgun or submachine gun with you.

Magnum AT

First Acquired: Beginnings 1

The AT is weaker than other Magnums, but it has faster reload time and larger ammo capacity.

Magnum AT

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	24	48	48	48	Infinite
Capacity	8	8	16	16	16
Power	C+	C+	C+	B	B

This powerful sidearm can blow away most enemies with one shot.

Rocket Launchers

Rocket launchers are highly destructive weapons that do significant direct and splash damage. The velocity of the shell is greater than that of any grenade launcher but slower than Magnum rounds. Therefore, it is difficult to score direct hits against fast-moving and/or distant enemies. Further, ammo capacity is low and ammo very scarce for this class. Overall, these weapons have limited versatility, so forgo them once the more useful Magnums become available.

Anti-Tank Gun

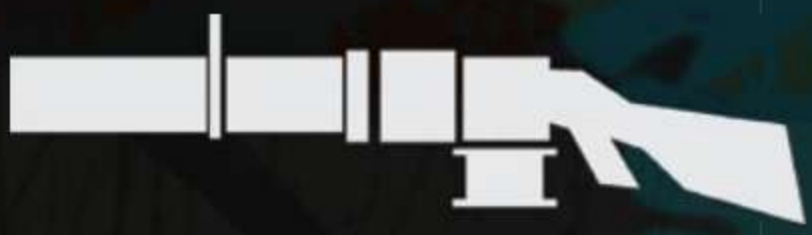
First Acquired: Dark Legacy 2

The AT gun possesses a very low ammo capacity but is the most powerful weapon available.

Anti-Tank Gun

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	2	4	4	4	Infinite
Capacity	1	1	2	2	2
Power	S	S	S	S+	S+
Cost	—	8	9	10	—
Total Cost	—	8	17	27	—

Rocket Launcher



First Acquired: Beginnings 2

Use this powerful destructive force wisely because there isn't much ammo.

Rocket Launcher

Upgrade	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4	Level 5
Ammo	6	12	12	12	Infinite
Capacity	3	3	6	6	6

MRL

First Acquired: Mansion Incident 3

This weapon packs amazing power with a large ammo capacity. The drawback is a slow reload.

Surviving the Game

Introduction

Basic training is over; it's time to jump into the deep end and see whether you sink or swim. Fortunately, everything you need to know to stay afloat is included here.

Here's the breakdown: There are four scenarios—Train Derailment, Mansion Incident, Raccoon's Destruction, and Umbrella's End. Further, each scenario has three chapters (Mansion Incident 1, 2, and 3 for example). Finally, chapters may have one or more subchapters.

The "Train Derailment" scenario recounts the events originally told in Resident Evil 0, while "Mansion Incident" revisits the events in the original Resident Evil. Raccoon's Destruction touches on both Resident Evil 2 and Resident Evil 3: Nemesis, and "Umbrella's End" is a new scenario.

Completing a scenario chapter generally unlocks the next chapter, and may unlock a subchapter. Once a subchapter is unlocked you can play it at any time. Because of this non-linearity, we have chosen to divide the walkthrough chapter into two parts. The first part deals with the 12 chapters in the main story arc while the second part deals with the 10 subchapters.

See the "Secrets" chapter for a level flow chart that illustrates how each scenario, chapter, and subchapter is unlocked.

The Maps

Because of the "on-rail" nature of the game (movement is automatic), the maps were designed to provide information at a glance. Just about everything you need to know is marked on each map, including item, file, and weapon locations; alternate paths and secret doors; and boss battles. Further, numbered callouts correspond to a specific section of the walkthrough. Simply match up the numbers to quickly gain more insight into the particular hazard you are facing. Here is a legend to help explain the various icons we use on each map.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Legend

Icon	Name	Description
	First Encounter	The blood splatter marks the first time you encounter a new enemy. Look to the corresponding walkthrough section for detailed info on the enemy.
	Action!	The bullet-hole icon denotes an action sequence. Every action sequence requires you to be quick with the controller in order to escape harm. We also use the bullet hole to mark a boss battle, as well as the beginning and end of a level.
	Hot Spot	The flame icon denotes a hot spot. The hot spot could be a particularly difficult fight, a secret path, or a plot point. Refer to the walkthrough to ensure you don't miss something important.
	Herb	Herb locations are denoted with the herb icon.
	First-aid spray	First-aid spray locations are denoted by this icon.
	File	Hidden files are denoted by this icon. You must break objects to find them.
	Grenade	Grenade locations are indicated by this icon.
	Submachine gun	Weapon/Ammo pickups of the submachine gun class are represented by this icon.
	Shotgun	Weapon/Ammo pickups of the shotgun class are represented by this icon.
	Magnum	Weapon/Ammo pickups of the magnum class are represented by this icon.
	Grenade launcher	Weapon/Ammo pickups of the grenade launcher class are represented by this icon.
	Rocket launcher	Weapon/Ammo pickups of the rocket launcher class are represented by this icon.
SW	Secondary weapon	Weapon/Ammo pickups for your chosen secondary weapon are represented by this icon.
	Main path	The red line represents the main path that you automatically follow.
	Alternate path	The blue line represents an alternate path. The walkthrough specifies the pros and cons of following each alternate path.

The weapon/ammo pickups refer to the class of weapon, not a specific type. This is because revisiting a level after you've unlocked new weapons may cause ammo for the new weapon to appear. For example, an automatic pistol may appear where once a submachine gun was found. However, the new weapon will always be of the same class as the icon that marks it (never will an assault shotgun appear where we've marked a rocket launcher).

Train Derailment 1

Rebecca boards the train, but her attempt to reach other S.T.A.R.S. members is met with static and dead air.

Caught off guard, her first encounter with an infected passenger may be her last.

Enter Billy Coen, Rebecca's knight in a shining handcuff. She recognizes him from his file, but more pressing matters delay the pleasantries and the accusations of mass murder.

This walkthrough assumes you've read the training portion of our guide and thus are familiar with both the basic controls and the heads-up display. Refer to the appropriate chapter for information on specific aspects of gameplay.

Train Derailment 1

Where: The Arklay Mountains, just outside Raccoon City

When: July 23, 1998

Who: Rebecca Chambers and Billy Coen

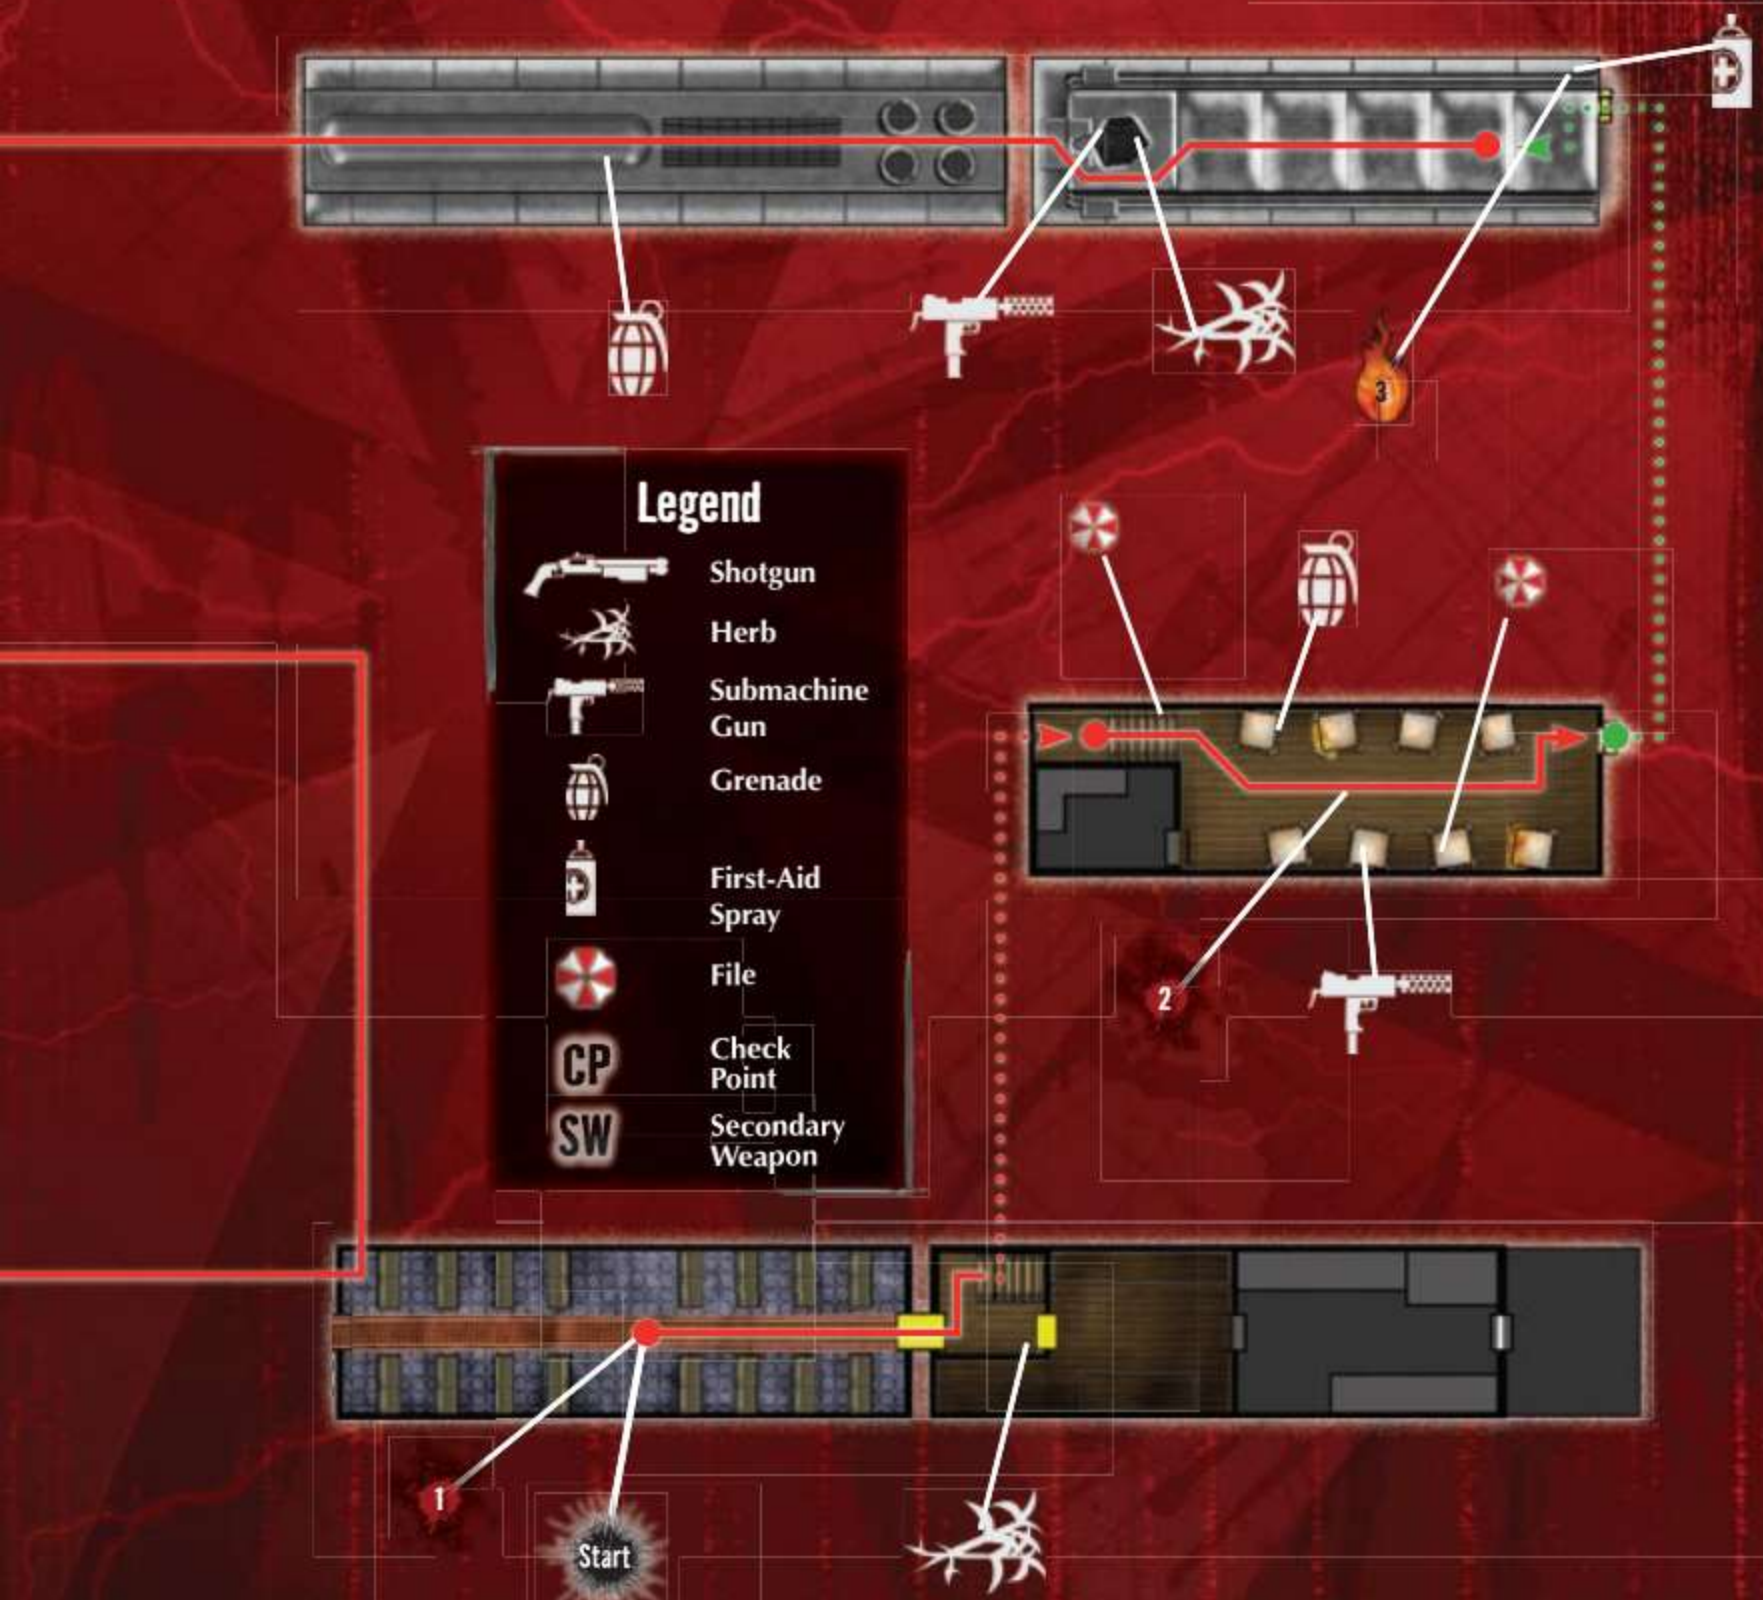
What: Leeches infected with the T-virus infiltrate the Ecliptic Express, infecting almost everyone onboard. Nearby, a helicopter carrying members of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team crash lands, and the surviving soldiers begin reconnaissance operations of the surrounding area. Rebecca Chambers, under orders to search for a missing prisoner, happens upon the stalled train and begins her investigation.

Enemies Encountered: Zombie, Leech, Cerberus, Stinger

Weapons Found: Shotgun, grenade, submachine gun

Items Found: Herb, first-aid spray, Memo on the Founding of Umbrella, Court Order for Transportation, Billy Coen Profile, Stinger Notes, Leech Notes, Ecliptic Express Notes, Raccoon Forest Notes, Rebecca Chambers Profile

Completion Bonuses: Train Derailment 2, Mixing Set (with "A" ranking), Briefcase (with "S" ranking).



Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

1 First Encounter: Zombie

The run-of-the mill Zombies encountered on board the train are slow-moving and purely melee attackers. At range, use your pistol to conserve ammo, and aim for the top of the head to score critical hits. Quickly switch to the shotgun once they get close.

2 First Encounter: Leech

Infected Leeches have turned the train's passengers into the walking dead. Pick them off with a single pistol round or simply wait until they attach themselves to your face and then cut them off with a swing of the knife. Wait too long, though, and they'll inflict damage.

CAUTION

Multiple Leeches sometimes coalesce into a higher-order humanoid that is much greater, in both strength and ferocity, than the sum of its parts. Switch to a submachine gun or shotgun and finish it off before it attacks with its whiplike appendages.

TIP

A well-placed grenade will annihilate every Leech caught in the blast.

The first-aid spray is arguably the best pickup in the game, as it completely restores your health once your health gauge falls to zero. Scan each mission map beforehand so you don't miss this valuable item.

After the check-point, move right and pick up a hidden file. You also encounter a familiar bio-organic weapon (B.O.W.).

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

5 First Encounter: Cerberus

The Cerberus creatures were created by Umbrella through the fusing of the T-virus to Doberman DNA. They are the fastest enemy you've faced thus far, and once they get close enough they'll leap up and bite you. A handgun will suffice one-on-one, but if they attack in packs, a shotgun is man's best friend.

In tight quarters, it's always best to have a heavy-hitting weapon equipped, just in case an enemy sneaks up on you.

6 Action!

Cutscenes in the middle of levels generally signal an action sequence, and the one here is no different. Be prepared to dodge a giant claw by performing the action shown on the screen.

Boss Battle: Stinger

Stinger is a bio-organic weapon of obvious origin. The exo-skeleton armor repels most small-arms fire, but it does have its weak spots. Aim for the head and the tip of the tail to inflict the most amount of damage.

The shotgun's power is ideal against Stinger, but don't waste ammo when the tail is down and the head is hidden behind the beast's huge claws. Instead, use this time to pick up the items scattered around the room.

Stinger's attacks are avoidable, provided you are quick enough with the controller! Be prepared to perform multiple dodges during the long battle.

Train Derailment 2

Rebecca receives orders from Richard Aiken, a fellow member of Bravo Team, to rendezvous at the mansion.

Rebecca and Billy head off to the rendezvous point, unaware that the incident on the train was simply a prelude to horrors to come.

1 First Encounter: Eliminator

A brief cutscene introduces Billy and Rebecca to the Eliminator: an ape that has been infected with the T-virus. Eliminators are ferocious, agile creatures that can just as easily duck under your field of view as jump high into the air. They also move laterally to avoid your sights. Still, the standard rule of engagement applies: A pistol is adequate against one, but switch to the big guns once you spot two or more.

2 First Encounter: Bat

Infected Bats are extremely aggressive but are easily dispatched with a pistol shot or a wave of the knife. Keep them in your field of view and make sure to time your swing correctly.

You can avoid the formation of a Leech humanoid by destroying packs of Leeches before they take shape. The submachine gun is ideal for this task.

4 Action!

Eliminators ambush Billy and Rebecca at this point. Be quick with the controller to avoid their attack. Afterward, you face several Eliminators all at once. Equip the shotgun to force them back.

The observatory is teeming with Leeches, enough to form into several humanoids. Using your knife to clear them off of your face obscures your view of the Leech men. Instead, use a shotgun to simultaneously clear your line of sight and push back the approaching hostiles. Better yet, try getting rid of those grenades you just picked up.

Boss Battle: Infected Bat

This Infected Bat is much larger than those you have faced previously, but its hide is just as soft. At range, pelt its head with pistol or submachine gun fire. Save the shotgun shells for when it gets in close.

As you move toward the rear of the cathedral, you encounter smaller bats. By now you should know how to deal with them.

Even a pistol round, if landed in the head, will turn back the attack of the Infected Bat. However, the fight will be far shorter if you use the shotgun.

Once you reach the roof, the Infected Bat summons friends to keep you occupied. Concentrate fire on the boss until you absolutely must deal with the smaller ones.

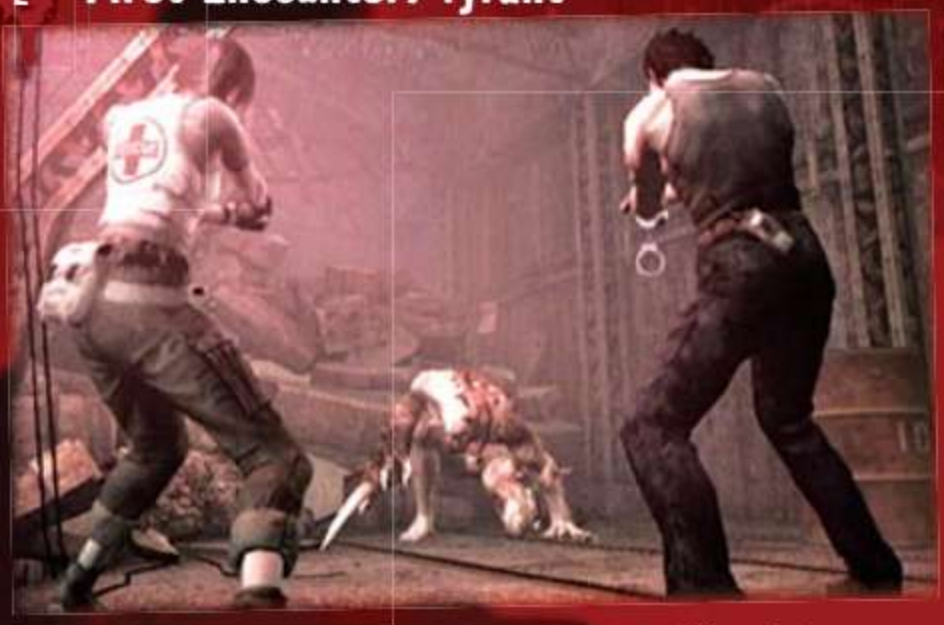
2 First Encounter: Tyrant



Although it appears like this is going to be a tough battle, it'll be over before you know it. Equip a shotgun and concentrate your fire on its heart and its back (when you're standing behind it). Five to ten shots will end the engagement.

3 Action!

Once Rebecca and Billy exit the elevator area, a spark ignites one of the fuel storage containers. Quick reflexes on your part will allow them to escape unharmed.

Boss Battle: Mimicry Marcus/Queen Leech

After escaping the conflagration, Rebecca and Billy stumble upon the source of the monster infestation: the deceased Dr. James Marcus, founding member of Umbrella and head of the Management Training Facility. Before he succumbed to death a decade prior, an infected Leech entered his system and fused with his own DNA. Now Dr. Marcus is bent on revenge, and unfortunately, you're in his way.

After his transformation into the monster is complete, Dr. Marcus throws leeches from a distance and lashes out with his tentacles when up close. Although he has no life gauge, you must continually push him back or take serious damage.

You'll have another chance to grab the herb in this room, so ignore it on the first pass if your health gauge is in the green.

Once the appendages sprout from its back, it's simply a matter of time before the first stage of this battle is complete. Shotgun blasts will do nicely, but save several rounds for the fight to come.

If the self-destruct warnings don't ruin a pleasant elevator ride, the fully mutated Dr. Marcus will. Aim for the mouth to keep the Queen Leech at bay, and hold out until the lift reaches the surface. Once you're there, the third and final stage of the fight begins.

When the beast is exposed to sunlight, all your weapons will deal extra damage. Aim for the outcropping of tentacles on the Queen Leech's back to push it backward, and then perform the specified action to move in closer. Repeat the process until the monster is forced into the sunlight, then quickly unleash your most devastating weaponry. Several well-placed shotgun shells will accomplish what William Birkin and Albert Wesker failed to do 10 years ago—kill Dr. James Marcus.

TIP

It is possible to destroy the Queen Leech immediately after the third round begins, but you have to be quick. Before you reach the top of the elevator shaft, equip your most powerful shotgun. Then, as soon as the Queen Leech bursts forth from the elevator shaft and you regain control, let her have it. She'll perish before Billy finishes his remark about her vulnerability to sunlight!

TIP

Although the shotgun does less damage per hit than the grenade launcher, its faster reload speed allows for much more damage over time. So, use the grenade launcher to force the creature into the sunlight, then switch to the shotgun and pump as many rounds into it as you can.

With the Queen Leech defeated and the Management Training Facility destroyed, Rebecca and Billy part ways. To show her gratitude, Rebecca removes Billy's dog tags and pronounces the wanted man "officially" deceased.

Destroy the door to the bathroom and quickly press Ⓐ to enter. This secret room contains a couple of valuable items.

3 First Encounter: Crimson Head

This breed of Zombie is much faster and more aggressive than any you've seen so far. Crimson Heads close the distance quickly, and their razor-sharp talons inflict heavy damage. Knock them back with a high-powered shotgun blast. Just don't get caught reloading!

The secret room has plenty of goodies to loot; unfortunately, a trio of Zombies and a Cerberus have already laid claim. To the victor go the spoils!

5 Action!

A cutscene interrupts play to build suspense for the forthcoming action sequence. Be ready to pull off the required maneuver to dodge and counterattack the Crimson Head that comes crashing through the door. Hmm—they bleed crimson, too.

6 First Encounter: Crow

Crows are very similar to the Bats you've already faced. They generally attack in groups and can be fended off with a knife stroke or a single pistol cartridge.

Chris and Jill are reunited with a member from Bravo Team. Unfortunately, Forest Speyer has already become infected with the T-virus and therefore must be eliminated.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Boss Battle: Yawn

Yawn is an infected cobra that has grown many times its normal size. Its scaly hide is resistant to damage, so concentrate your fire on its mouth.

Once you move to the other side of the library, be prepared for Yawn's quick strike. It'll feint to your left, then quickly dart to the right and strike. You have to time your shot perfectly to interrupt it.

A shotgun blast to the open mouth will repel most of Yawn's strikes and send it slithering away.

After taking the infected cobra down to half of its life, you'll have the chance to climb up a ladder and finish the fight much more quickly. Shoot the chandelier to drop it on the unsuspecting snake below.

Yawn follows you to the second floor, giving you an up-close chance to do some serious damage. Hit it with all you've got!

The victory is a good one, but you'll soon find that Bravo Team also had a hand in the creature's demise, and they paid a much more grievous price.

Jill and Chris locate Rebecca and Richard, members of the Bravo Team that they were sent in to find. However, Richard is seriously wounded from a previous encounter. That story is retold in the subchapter "Nightmare 1," which you've unlocked by completing this chapter.

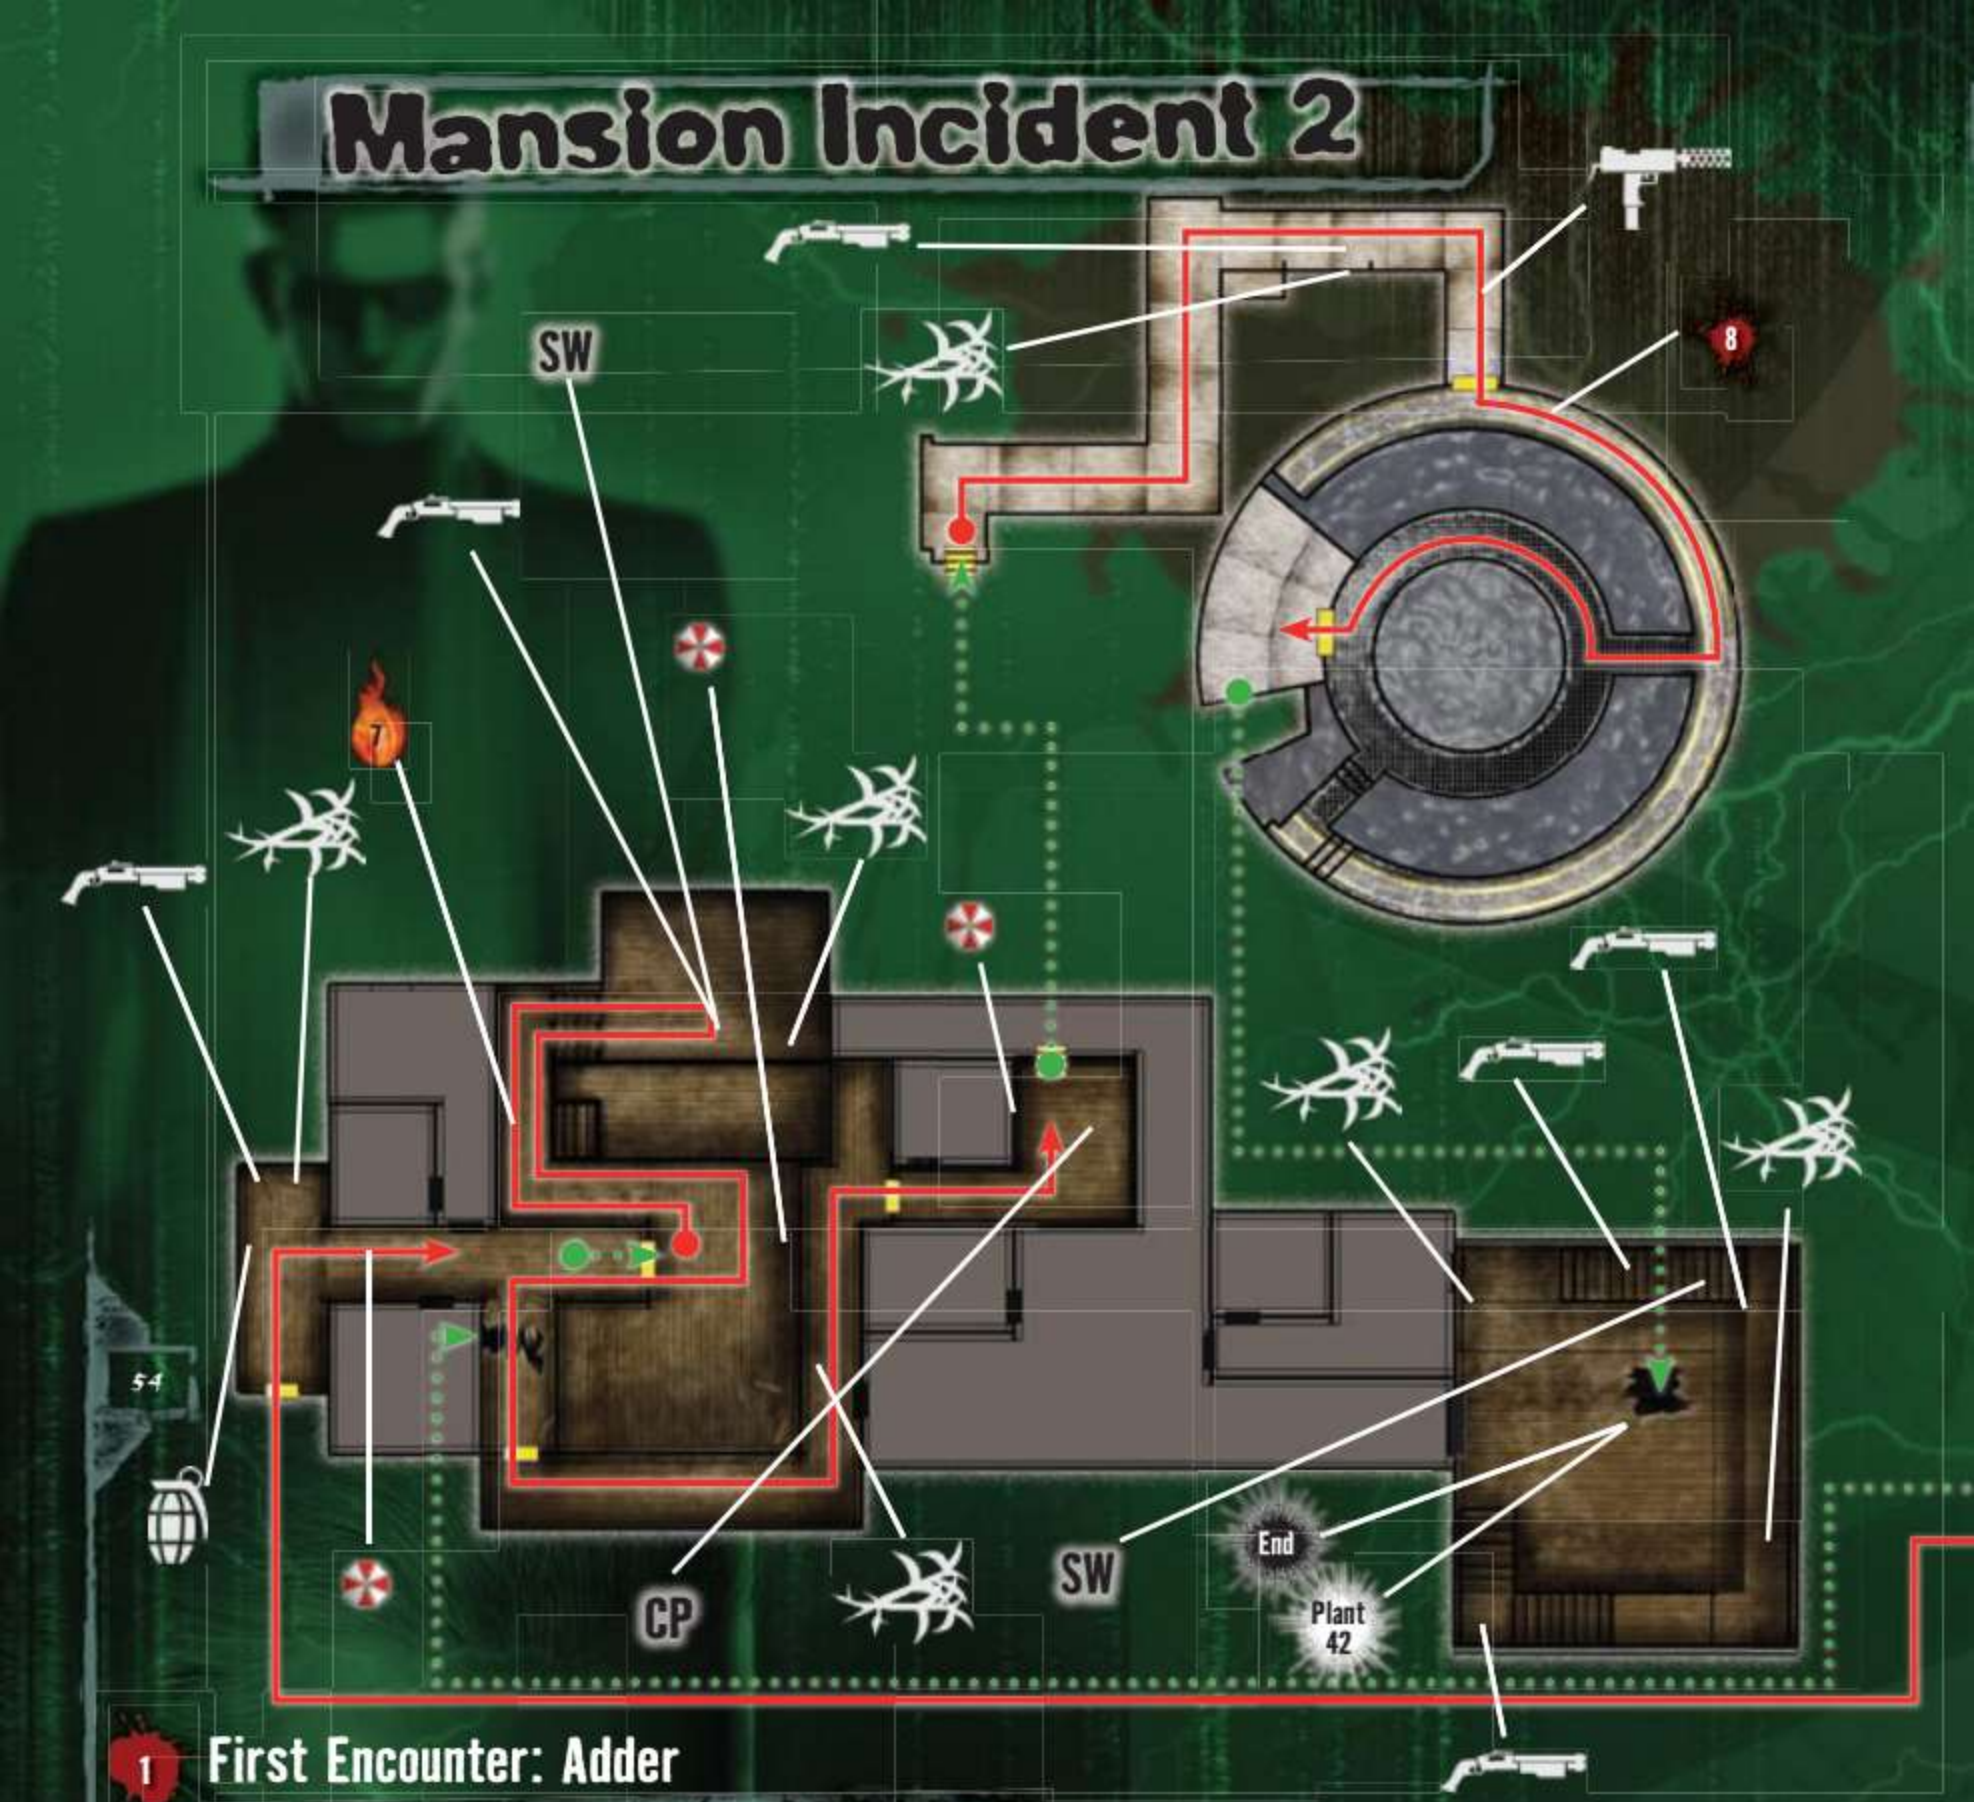
Mansion Incident 2



1 First Encounter: Adder

The Adder is a snake that has been secondarily infected by the T-virus. Its small size makes it a tough target for a pistol or submachine gun round, but they don't warrant wasting the ammunition of larger weapons either. Further, relying on the knife to fend them off usually results in taking damage. Whatever you choose, dispose of them before they perform their leap attack.

Once you clear out the courtyard, you have a choice between two paths. If speed matters, then take the northern path through the waterfall, it's the fastest. If you are collecting files, both paths contain at least one, so it'll take two trips through the level to get them all.

3 First Encounter: Hunter

If you choose the western path, you'll immediately encounter this slimy bio-organic weapon. Nimble and quick, the Hunter is reminiscent of the Eliminators you faced earlier.

Once the Hunter leaps to the courtyard, you'll be prompted to pull off a quick maneuver to dodge its first attack. Whether you're successful or not, control returns to you so you can notch your first Hunter kill. Use the shotgun or a controlled submachine gun burst to end the fight fast.

4 NOTE

The first enemies you encounter after descending into the courtyard basement are Hunters. Read the "First Encounter: Hunter" text to familiarize yourself with the vicious B.O.W.

5 Action!

Once you reach this point, a boulder begins rolling toward you. Manipulate the controller as specified on-screen to successfully dodge it. Failure results in immediate death, even if you have a first-aid spray handy.

6 First Encounter: Web Spinner/Black Tiger

In the hallways and rooms beneath the courtyard, you'll come face to face with two more Umbrella creations: The Web Spinner and the Black Tiger. Both infected spiders spit venom from afar and attempt to sink their fangs into their victim when up close.

Shoot the venom they spit before it connects and then focus on the spider itself before it has a chance to lunge and bite.

At this junction, you can either proceed upstairs into the billiard room, or downstairs into the bar. To get all of the pickups in both rooms, choose the upstairs room, grab the items, and then on your way back turn towards the bar and grab the items there as well.

8 First Encounter: Neptune

The amusing thing about Umbrella's experiments on sharks is that before long, the testing was abandoned because they weren't able to improve on the effectiveness of the aquatic killer. Plus, sharks are only dangerous in the water, which is comforting to those on dry land. Unfortunately, you've just stepped into a giant aquarium!

Neptune charges you with mouth agape and sharp teeth gleaming. Bury a few rounds in its maw; it'll rethink its strategy and change course.

The next time it approaches, you're prompted to dodge its leaping attack. Whether you're successful or not, it charges you once more before you reach the exit. Like the first time, aim for the open mouth to alter its course.

Boss Battle: Plant 42

Neptunes aren't the only Umbrella experiments that thrive in the darkness and damp. Certain types of plants do as well: The giant, aggressive, mean-spirited, carnivorous, poison-spitting, tentacled type of plants. Feed me, Seymour!

The tentacles spew deadly spores that burn on contact with flesh. Destroy them before they reach you. If you're playing in co-op mode, one person should take out the spores while the other concentrates on the plant's weak spot.

Often, you'll need to dodge Plant 42's various attacks. Be ready to execute whatever controller manipulation is called for and then return fire. Aim at the exposed stamen that appears periodically throughout the fight.

The submachine gun's rapid rate-of-fire is just what the exterminator ordered when it comes to quickly disposing of Plant 42.

1 NOTE

Descending the stairs located here, you encounter a new type of Zombie that spits bile at its victims. Destroy the flying projectile before setting your crosshairs on the source. Only the type of attack is new; the Zombie's abilities and vulnerabilities are the same as those you've already encountered and dispatched.

2

Resist pressing 3 and traveling down the eastern corridor. Instead, pass it by and you'll be rewarded with a file, an herb, and some ammunition. Plus, you'll bypass the Chimera, which are tougher opponents than the Zombies you'll face instead.

3 First Encounter: Chimera

If you took the eastern (alternate) path, then at the end of the corridor you meet your first Chimera. The Chimera is another of Umbrella's twisted bio-organic weapons. The DNA of a common fly and the T-virus have been mixed to grotesque effect.

Although the DNA cocktail that created the Chimera stripped the creature of its ability to fly, it moves very quickly and is able to adhere and crawl on the walls and ceiling. Luckily, your shotgun makes a handy flyswatter. Leave the resulting mess for the Umbrella janitorial staff to clean up.

Jill and Chris enter the heart of the research facility and are surprised to find Wesker making himself at home. Wesker explains to the confused pair that tonight was a grand experiment, designed to test Umbrella's biological weaponry against trained combatants.

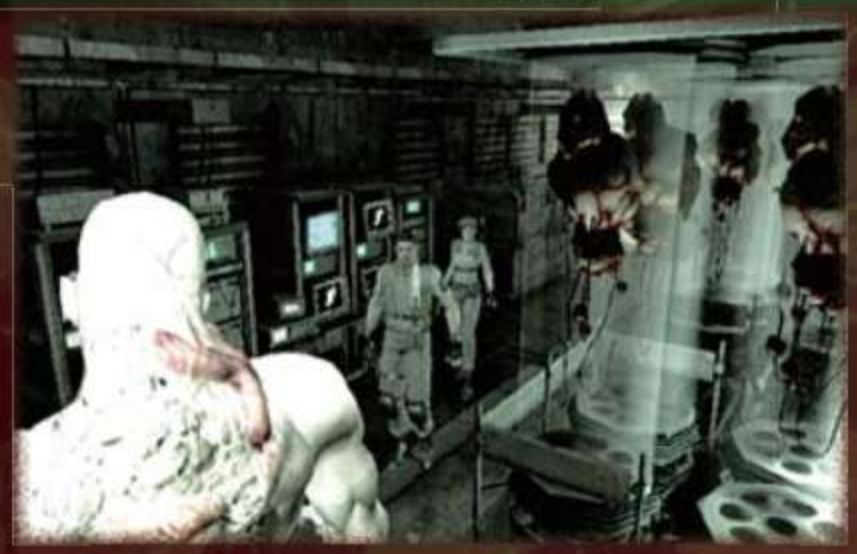
Mansion Incident 3

Wesker confides to the pair that his affiliation with Umbrella has come to an end. What is his ultimate purpose? Could the serum he injected into his arm have something to do with it?

Wesker fondly introduces Umbrella's ultimate weapon: Tyrant. The sentiment isn't shared by the creature, however, and Wesker is impaled and cast aside. A fitting end for a traitor, but in the Resident Evil universe, the dead don't stay dead for long.

Boss Battle: Tyrant



Wesker dealt with, the Tyrant now turns its attention to Chris and Jill. Get ready; the action starts immediately and you are forced to dodge the mutant's charge.

Its weak spot is its exposed heart. Aim true and fire at will. Don't give it time to recover or it'll slash you with its incredibly long and razor-sharp talons.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Boss Battle: Tyrant (continued)

TIP

The shotgun packs enough of a punch to drive the creature back. Use a weaker weapon at your own peril.

NOTE

Once the Tyrant falls, Jill and Chris race to the elevator to escape the facility's imminent destruction. At ground level, the radio picks up Brad's call to any survivors. He's at the helipad but low on fuel. Fight your way to the only escape option left.

Boss Battle: Tyrant (Second Location)

You didn't think Umbrella's ultimate weapon was down for good, did you? At least this time there is a health gauge so you can see just how much of a beating it's gonna take before it falls for good!

You know the drill: Aim for the heart. If you time your shots just right, you can turn aside Tyrant just before it lands a melee attack.

If you want to live to fight another day, you must be quick with the controller as well. Perform the required actions to both safely dodge some of Tyrant's more devastating attacks and to put some distance between you and the persistent S.O.B.—er, B.O.W.

Wow, all of that strength and he can jump?! Make it a crash landing by putting a round in his chest just before he reaches you.

If he picks you up, inflict maximum pain quickly to lessen the amount of damage you sustain. Don't get caught reloading while being held; instead, switch to the knife and swing away—you'll suffer some, but it'll be bearable.

Inflict enough damage and Brad will drop an MRL to help you finish the job. The MRL is a rocket launcher capable of inflicting massive damage. Use it and leave the corpse of the defeated monstrosity to the oncoming inferno.

The mansion explodes, erasing all evidence of the previous night's events. Safe aboard the chopper, Jill rests her head on Chris's shoulder, while Rebecca sleeps on the floor below. For some the nightmare is over, but for others it has just begun.

Raccoon's Destruction 1

Where: Raccoon City

When: September 29, 1998

Who: Jill Valentine and Carlos Oliveira

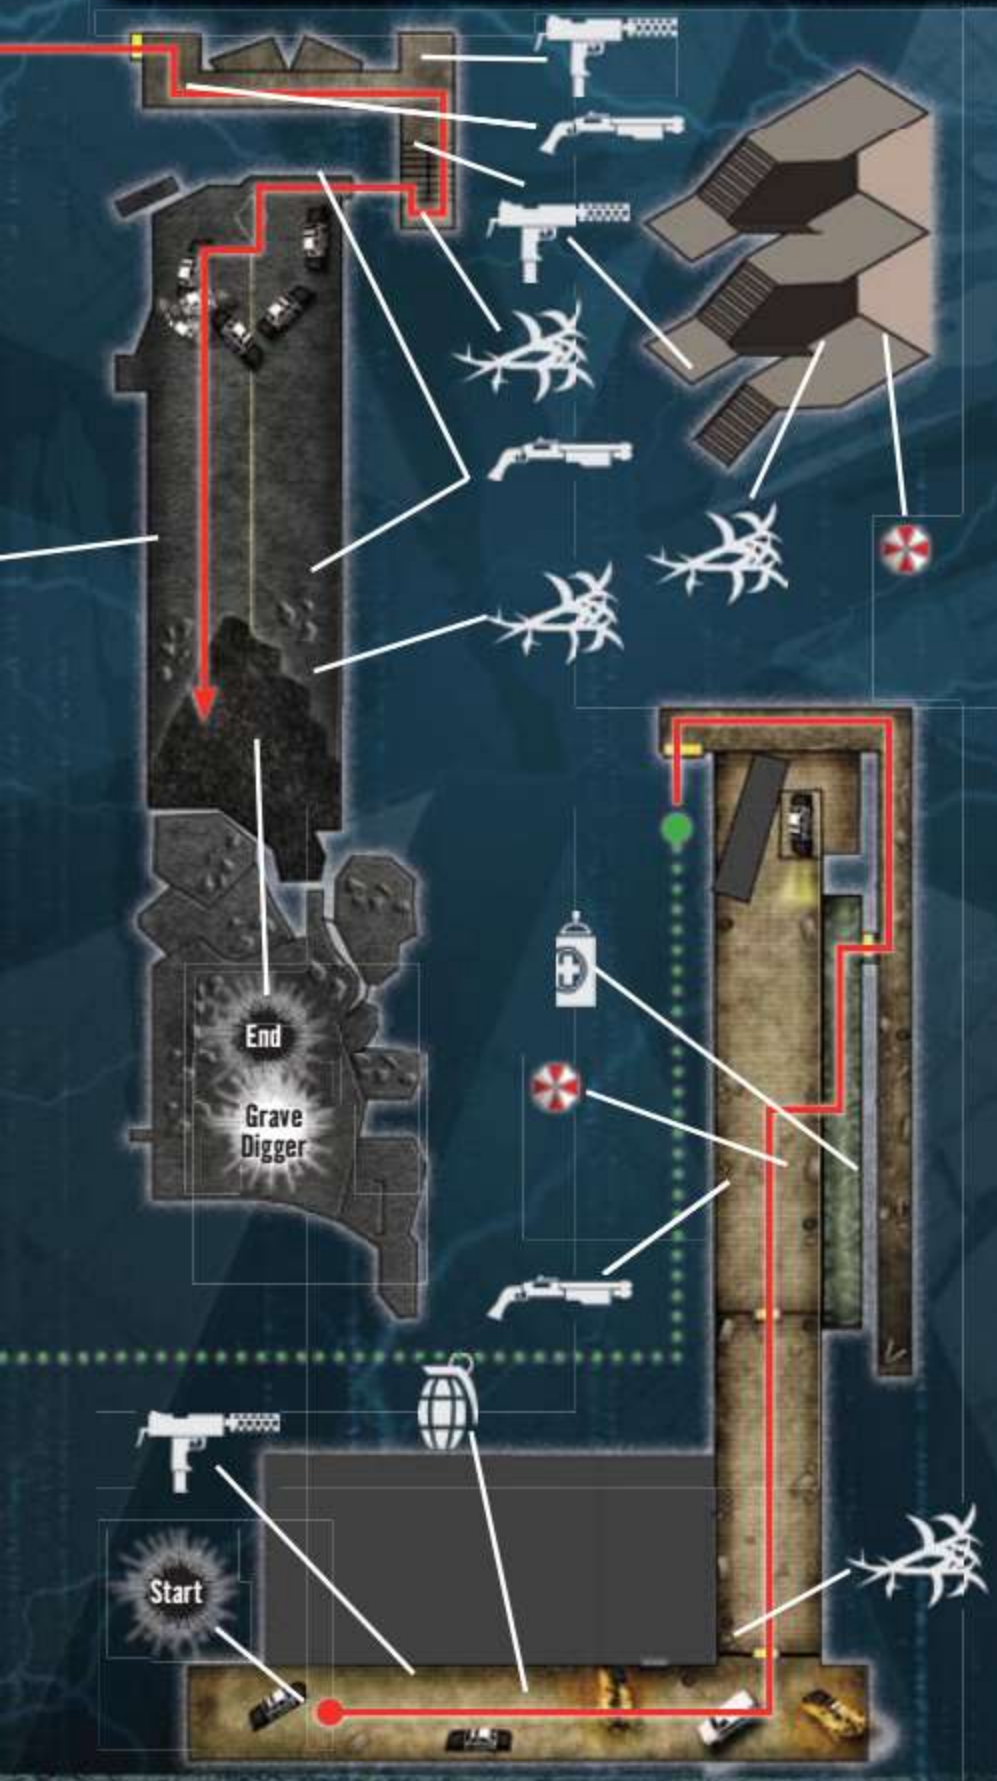
What: The destruction of the mansion didn't stop the T-virus from infecting the inhabitants of nearby Raccoon City. Feigning public safety concerns, Umbrella sends in its own security force to quell the infected uprising. And once again, Raccoon City Police Department S.T.A.R.S. operative Jill Valentine is caught in the middle of the action.

Enemies Encountered: Zombie, Crow, Cerberus, Web Spinner, Hunter, Grave Digger

Weapons Found: Shotgun, grenade, submachine gun, submachine gun HP, assault shotgun

Items Found: Herb, first-aid spray, U.B.C.S. Notes, Jill's Diary, Carlos Oliveira Profile, Raccoon City Notes, Reporter's Memo, Dario's Memo

Completion Bonuses: Raccoon's Destruction 2, S.T.A.R.S. Card (Jill's) (with "A" ranking), Book of Wisdom/Future Compass (with "S" ranking)



Once again, Jill is caught in the middle of a nightmare, but this time it's on a much larger scale. As she's overwhelmed, all seems lost. Enter Umbrella agent Carlos Oliveira. Proficient with the use of submachine guns, Carlos makes short work of the attacking Zombies.

The immediate threat eliminated, Carlos and Jill set off to reach the rescue chopper.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

TIP

The Raccoon City streets are much wider than the cramped corridors of the mansion, and therefore Zombies are often farther away. Use the distance to your advantage and practice earning critical hits.

There are two ways to go once you reach this point. If you are trying to collect all of the files, then head south (left). However, if achieving the fastest time is your concern, head north (right).

2 Action!

Upon choosing the path to the right, you immediately enter an action sequence. A Zombie steps on a land mine, and you need to be quick or be dead. Perform the action on time and you'll live through the blast.

3 Action!

On the overpass, a runaway truck tries to make road kill out of Jill and Carlos. Perform the specified action and you'll save yourself a trip back to the checkpoint, and Jill and Carlos a trip to the morgue.

TIP

There appears to be no end to the Zombie horde, and often you'll face many of them at one time. Remember—grenades do no good sitting in your inventory!

Boss Battle: Grave Digger

The horrific ensemble of creatures that inhabit Raccoon City wouldn't be complete without an underground monster! Grave Digger is an infected worm of immense size. It can cut through surface soil and concrete with ease, and when it gets hungry its hundreds of sharp teeth ensure the meal is well-chewed before passing through the fleshy gullet.

Target the mouth for maximum damage, but don't neglect the rest of the body if given the opportunity. Unlike Yawn's, Grave Digger's body is vulnerable to bullets and buckshot. However, when the creature goes subterranean on you, hold your fire and prepare for an action prompt.

Rounding out Grave Digger's repertoire of attacks are an impressive leap attack and the ability to hurl chunks of concrete and asphalt at its foes. Both can be turned aside with small-arms fire, but in the case of rapidly descending B.O.W.s, why chance it? After all, the assault shotgun you picked up affords plenty of room for error.

Falling debris is easy enough to target and destroy, but sometimes pieces fall outside of your field of view. Use the control stick to take a quick look around and make sure you don't miss anything.

The powerful weapons you have at your disposal, coupled with the beast's soft skin, make this a relatively easy fight to walk away from. Simply employ your hardest-hitting weapons and lay the worm to rest in a grave of his own making.

The Licker is an aptly named mutant that attacks at range with its long tongue. Fortunately, they signal their attack by waving their tongues in the air for a few seconds. In groups, target those with an unfurled tongue first.

They also sport sharp nails that they use to great effect when up close. Give them a manicure with a flurry of submachine gun HP rounds.

1 First Encounter: Nemesis

Not long after you enter the police station you encounter Nemesis. Intelligent, resilient, and inhumanly strong, Nemesis poses your greatest threat, and your toughest fight.

Nemesis shrugs off your bullets with impunity and strides closer and closer with the confidence of a conqueror. Save your ammo and simply perform the action required to evade his powerful swing. You'll duck around him and head off down the hallway, leaving the mutant behind. But, like a B-movie slasher, Nemesis follows at a leisurely pace. When he gets close, take a few head shots and he'll drop to his knees.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Carlos shoots at the nearby grenade rounds and a wall of fire engulfs the hallway. Be quick with the controller and only Nemesis will require first aid.

While attempting to take the exterior stairwell to the roof, you once again meet Nemesis. When the mutant-in-black gets close to the red oil drum, blow it up to slow him down.

After a couple more uneventful run-ins with Nemesis, you finally engage him again here. The good news is that this time he's armed with a rocket launcher! It's only fair. After all, it is two against one.

The rockets he fires are slow-moving, but their erratic trajectory makes them difficult to hit. Do what it takes to detonate them before they reach you, then concentrate fire on the weapon that Nemesis is carrying. Hit it enough times and it explodes, ending the confrontation.

Boss Battle: Nemesis

The rooftop provides the arena for your final encounter with Nemesis. Detonating the fuel canisters near him will cause his final mutation. Nemesis has myriad attacks at his disposal. Some, like the choke-hold, are eerily reminiscent of Tyrant—Nemesis's predecessor. The same rules apply: Inflict as much damage as you can, and as quickly as possible, to escape unscathed.

When Nemesis leaps to the walls high above the rooftop, he forces his long tentacles into the ground below. They appear close by and slash at you, inflicting decent damage. The appendages can't be destroyed, so don't waste time and ammo trying. Instead, concentrate your fire on the prostrate and vulnerable Nemesis.

Nemesis decides that leaping at you is the best way to rejoin the fight. When he does, you'll have to pull off an action maneuver to avoid major damage.

The MRL rounds found on the roof are just what the surgeon ordered to perform projectile-surgery on the hulking mutant. There are not many of them, but they inflict heavy damage, so use them when you can't miss. Soon, Nemesis concedes the battle and throws himself off the roof.

Carlos and Jill are rescued just in time to see the missile detonate over Raccoon City. There is no way Umbrella will get away with destroying an entire city, right?

Who: Jill Valentine and Chris Redfield

What: Jill and Chris, now part of a bio-weapon cleanup team, infiltrate Umbrella's base of operations in Russia.

Enemies Encountered: Zombie, Cerberus, Hunter, Crimson Head, Chimera, Black Tiger

Weapons Found: Grenade, automatic pistol, shotgun SA

Items Found: Herb, first-aid spray, Umbrella Russian Branch Notes, Umbrella Raccoon City Judgment, Eradication Operation Notes, Talos Project Proposal

Completion Bonuses: Umbrella's End 2, Plastic Bomb/Detonator (with "A" ranking), Film A/B/C/D (with "S" ranking)

You have two options at this point: Secure the stairs (the alternate path) or infiltrate from below (the main path). If time is a concern, then travel below as it is a few minutes faster than the main path. Also, if you are collecting files, the path below contains two, whereas the main path contains none. Be aware however, that the underground path contains almost double the amount of enemies as the main path. The choice is yours.

Along each route are red explosive barrels that will help you deal with the advancing horde. The placement of these barrels is not random—they usually signal an oncoming rush of creatures. The rush may be delayed however, so don't indiscriminately fire at barrels. Instead, wait until the maximum number of enemies is within the barrel's blast radius.

2 Action!

On the elevator surface, a large hook breaks free from its moorings and threatens to crush Jill and Chris. Perform the correct action and they dive to safety.

Reach the area near the elevator control panel and Hunters begin to attack relentlessly. Switch to the shotgun SA and don't stop shooting until the reptiles are reduced to a twitching mass of scales and blood. Throw a grenade or two when you start getting overwhelmed.

Chris activates the elevator and the pair descends to the basement of the compound, one step closer to ending Umbrella's reign of terror forever.

Walking plants? Well, now we've seen it all! This freaky foliage is the locomotive offspring of Plant 42. It spits digestive enzymes and uses its lengthy appendages to whip enemies. Aim for the flower-like head section to uproot and wilt the bizarre creature.

This maze of rooms offers several ways to proceed. Follow the correct path and you're rewarded with a visit to the armory—just in time to face Umbrella's ultimate bio-weapon!

The honeycombed rooms are all hexagonal. All paths, save one, go to the boss room. One path leads to a weapons cache, and that's the one to take. The correct movement choices are:

1. Northwest (left)
2. Northeast (right)
3. Northeast (left)
4. Northwest (the only choice)
5. Northeast (right)
6. North (the only choice)
7. Northeast (the door you are facing)

Navigate the honeycomb successfully and you are rewarded with weapons and ammo galore. You only have a few seconds, so destroy the glass on every side and then mash Ⓐ to pick up as much as you can.

Submachine guns are on the left, shotguns on the right, and ammo for your selected secondary weapon is on the back wall. A file is on the right at the back of the room.

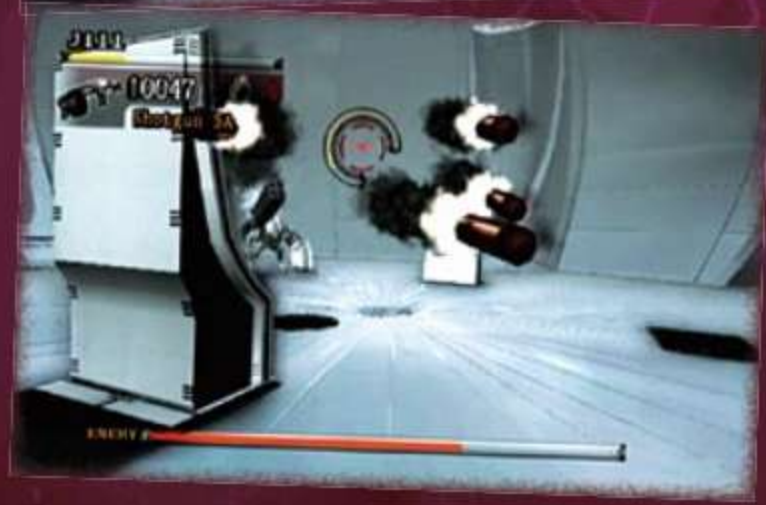
Boss Battle: Talos

The final battle is against the ultimate mutant in Umbrella's product line. Heavily armored and controlled by the Red Queen, Talos is more resilient and more intelligent than previous incarnations of Tyrants.



The initial battle is spent dodging Talos's charges by performing action maneuvers and destroying the many rockets the mutant fires while on the run. Use every opportunity to target the plated armor that covers the brute's body and slowly whittle away at its health.

Once you've overpowered Talos in its initial form, the real fight begins. Talos transforms into a sedentary abomination. Now it's anchored to the training room ceiling by its massive spine, and the beast's attacks will put your agility and dexterity to the ultimate test.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Boss Battle: Talos (continued)

The clawed tentacles that have sprouted from Talos's spine perform a number of devastating attacks. The first is a laser attack that forces you to perform an action maneuver to escape harm. Unlike in other battles where maneuvers were few and far between, you'll be forced to execute many actions during the course of this fight, many of them successive (we're talking three in a row!). It's imperative that you pull these off correctly, as the damage sustained from a single hit is severe.

Like Nemesis's tentacles, Talos's appendages can travel through concrete and steel. Target the claws before they reach you to force them back, and mind any falling debris that is loosed in the skirmish.

Initially, its "weak" spots are the tears in its shoulder and chest. Take every opportunity to bury some lead in those areas. When its health drops to just below 50 percent it comes crashing to the floor, exposing its true weakness. The bright red organ is hard to miss, so make sure you don't! Now is the time to unleash everything you've got. Don't hesitate or think about conserving ammo; end the battle here and now.

With the destruction of Talos, Umbrella is finally undone. However, the victory isn't complete. Wesker is still out there, somewhere. Exactly what role he played in the defeat of Talos is unclear, but a simple monochrome screen gives us a very big clue into his motivations.

"U.M.F.-013" is the designation for Umbrella's mainframe. More importantly, it contains the self-aware AI defense system program designed to protect Umbrella's assets at all costs: Red Queen. With all of Umbrella's shared knowledge, including the Red Queen program, in Wesker's inhuman hands, there is no predicting the devastation he is capable of unleashing.

If you're wondering exactly how Wesker helped you out (as he claims in the voice-over), or about the fate of Sergei, unlock and play through "Dark Legacy 2." Check out the "Authorized Personnel Only" chapter to learn how.

As he sets out to lure the unsuspecting team to its demise, the Umbrella scientist decides the evidence must be destroyed. We now know who activates the Management Training Facility's self-destruct mechanism during Rebecca's and Billy's final battle with the Queen Leech.

Boss Battle: Tyrant

On the elevator surface, you encounter a Tyrant. Although it's from a previous viral strain than the one faced later in the lab, it is still formidable. However, you've already encountered one, so here's the short refresher course: Dodge its charges by performing controller actions, and aim for the exposed, pulsating heart.

Once the elevator reaches its destination, Tyrant rises again. This time a health bar informs you of the monstrosity's remaining vitality. A submachine gun on full auto or the Magnum AT (Wesker's specialty) will make quick work of the obsolete strain.

Boss Battle: Ivan

A cutscene introduces us to Sergei Vladimir. Sergei is displeased that Wesker failed his mission to reclaim the Management Training Facility and believes he needs to be taught a lesson. Sergei unleashes his bodyguard, Ivan, to school Wesker in the finer points of humility and responsibility.

Ivan's attacks are very similar to those of Tyrant and Nemesis. You'll need to perform specific actions to dodge his powerful swings. You can also turn away his charges and leaps, as well as escape his clutches, by inflicting heavy damage before his punches connect.

When Ivan's health bar is depleted, the detonation of the Management Training Facility ends the lesson and both parties embark on their respective missions.

Where: Umbrella's base of operation, Russia

When: February 18, 2003

Enemies Encountered: Zombie, Licker, Chimera, Bat, Hunter, Black Tiger, Ivan, Infected Bat

Wesker infiltrates the Umbrella manufacturing facility to complete the plan he's been working toward since he first began secondary testing on exposure to the T-virus in 1983.

Meanwhile, Sergei unleashes his store of bio-organic weapons on the employees of the facility to destroy any evidence of Umbrella wrongdoing. He also instructs Red Queen to activate Talos, Umbrella's newest experiment and crown jewel.

Wesker's impressive descent to the basement of the facility is capped off with a battle against an Infected Bat. It has decent stamina, but your arsenal has grown far more powerful since you first encountered the flying rodent. Use an upgraded weapon of your choice and aim for its chest and head. The battle won't last long.

Boss Battle: Ivan

Sergei unleashes two Ivans on Wesker this time, hoping to finally rid Umbrella of Wesker's incessant meddling. And if two seem unfair, just remember—with the introduction of the T-virus to his system Wesker has become twice the man he used to be.

There are two life gauges, one for each Ivan. Whenever possible, concentrate your fire on one Ivan at a time. The twins are discernable by their uniquely colored eyewear.

By now you are familiar with Ivan's charge attack. Remember that concentrated and heavy fire can turn the assault aside. The Ivans alternate their charges, so once you disrupt one, immediately focus your fire on the other.

Shortly after the battle begins, the Ivans take control of a stationary rocket launcher. Your first priority is knocking the rockets out of the air before they reach you. However, the twins are vulnerable while operating the weapon, so use any opportunity to damage the static targets.

The third stage of the fight takes place in the octagonal shaft where it began. Be prepared to perform action maneuvers to dodge the pair's attacks.

Once the battle is taken to the air, remember that the same rules of engagement apply: Turn back each leaping mutant in turn, never allowing either to get close enough to strike.

The battle continues in a similar pattern until Wesker emerges victorious. Once both Ivans have fallen, the chapter is complete.

BIOHAZARD

Boss Battle: Sergei

The Sergei mutant's looks and actions are a bit different from those of the Tyrant types you've faced previously, but when analyzed, the attacks are very similar.

It comes as no surprise that it lashes at you with its barbed tentacle. Quickly perform an action to dodge it.

The spider-like legs protruding from its back are its main means of locomotion. When it begins scuttling around the room toward you, ready your sights on it and fire just as it reaches you. If you succeed, you'll deter its attack and force it to the floor.

The creature also possesses a ranged attack. It launches a globule in the air that explodes into several shards. Destroy them before they connect.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Boss Battle: Sergei (continued)

Finally, the Sergei creature picks you up and attempts to crush you. Successfully pull off an action and you'll leap to safety. Once you land, the mutant's back is exposed. Fire relentlessly at the glowing organ and watch the abomination's life gauge plummet.

NOTE

Sergei makes an illuminating revelation during his battle with Wesker: It seems that Umbrella made 10 clones of him and infected all 11 with the T-virus. From Tyrant to Nemesis to Talos, all T-types are Sergei clones.

Wesker downloads all of Umbrella's records to a portable disk, then erases the mainframe. Before escaping, he pauses to look over the horizon at the sunrise. Umbrella's day has ended, but the dawn of a new day has arrived—a day envisioned by a madman with strength, cunning, and hatred to match. What Wesker has in store, we can only guess, but it promises to be far more horrific than any outbreak faced thus far.

Secret Level

The Secret Level is a challenging and fun shooting-gallery mini-game. There are 10 levels that each consist of the same two rounds.

Round one is the shooting gallery. Ten Zombies poke their heads up from behind the counter, one after another (in later levels they run and crawl across the screen as well). Shoot as many as you can.

Round two starts when you turn to face the lab doorway. Suddenly a horde of Zombies rushes in. They take one hit to kill, but the bad news is that so do you! Get hit and you start over.

The number of Zombies you face during round two of every level equals 10 minus the number of Zombies you killed in round one. For example, if you killed four Zombies in round one, you face six in round two.

After the second round on the tenth level, you square off against the boss Zombie. Use your head to figure out how to put him down.

One more thing—don't let the lack of a heads-up display fool you; you are packing more than the pistol. Scroll through the weapons as you normally would and pull the trigger to figure out what you have. The more weapons you unlock in the actual game, the more you have here. There are even unconfirmed rumors of a first-aid spray, but we'll let you prove or refute that.

THE FILE ROOM

CONFIDENTIAL

Collected here, for your viewing pleasure, are transcriptions of every in-game file. They have been sorted and arranged to provide the researcher a coherent and ordered account of the events that directly relate to the T-virus outbreak in the Arklay Mountains and the surrounding areas. Further, new information has surfaced regarding the events that occurred in 2003 at an Umbrella base located somewhere in southern Russia.

BACKGROUND

This section provides a recap of the events surrounding the infection and the crash of the Ecliptic Express, the destruction of the Umbrella Management Training Facility, the destruction of the Arklay Research Facility (the mansion), and the viral outbreak in and subsequent annihilation of Raccoon City.

Resident Evil 0

Summary

Resident Evil 0 Digest 1

Bizarre murder cases with people being found dead, their bodies half-eaten, were being reported in the areas near Raccoon City.

The city's elite special forces unit, S.T.A.R.S. (Special Tactics and Rescue Service), sent Bravo Team to the scene. However, due to a mysterious engine failure, Bravo Team's helicopter crash-landed in the forest.

Bravo Team narrowly escaped with their lives and stumbled onto a heavily damaged prison convoy and the brutally dismembered corpses of the Marines in charge. Enrico Marini, Bravo Team's commander, ordered that a search be made for Billy Coen, a former Marine who escaped from the convoy. The newest member of Bravo Team, Rebecca Chambers, discovered a train stopped in the woods and went inside to investigate. Apparently the train had met with some kind of accident—she found all of the passengers dead. One of the supposedly dead passengers came to life and attacked Rebecca.

Facing certain death, Rebecca was rescued by the prisoner, Billy Coen. Rebecca was still suspicious of Billy but realized that they needed to work together if they wanted to survive the nightmare. Shortly after, the train suddenly started to move. It accelerated and was rapidly approaching dangerous speeds.

To prevent the imminent derailment, the pair engaged the brake. However, it was too late and the train rolled on its side. The two barely managed to escape the wreck.

Nearby was Umbrella's Management Training Facility.

Resident Evil 0 Digest 2

The Management Training Facility had been closed down since the death of Dr. James Marcus. Parasitic Leeches taking the form of humans were attacking any trespassers that entered the abandoned facility. It was true terror come to life.

The two Umbrella officers, Albert Wesker and William Birkin, were aware of the unfolding events. They were sent to recover the facility, but that plan fell apart with the endless waves of attacking monsters.

While monitoring Billy and Rebecca's progress, they began to sense a presence bent on Umbrella's destruction and decided to destroy the facility. Rebecca and Billy came to trust and rely on each other while struggling through the nightmarish circumstances. Rebecca realized that Billy did not have it in him to have murdered 23 innocent people.

The pair eventually met with a reanimated Marcus. He told them the startling story of how he was assassinated 10 years ago.

He had just successfully replicated the T-virus after years of researching Leeches when two of Ozwell E. Spencer's employees, Albert Wesker and William Birkin, assassinated him and stole his research.

The evolved Leeches attached themselves to Marcus's corpse, absorbing his DNA into their own until eventually creating a copy of him. This new Marcus sought revenge on Umbrella and the world by initiating the outbreak of the T-virus to the surrounding Raccoon Forest, resulting in a full-scale biohazard. The copied Marcus eventually transformed into the Queen Leech, while the timer began to run down on a bomb that was set to level the facility.

Rebecca and Billy knew what had to be done as the curtain on their last battle rose.

Ecliptic Express Notes

A special express train bound for the Management Training Facility, the Ecliptic Express appears to be a typical train at first glance, but its purpose is to bring Umbrella employees to the facility to undergo special training. The rails are privately owned and stretch through Raccoon Forest to allow direct delivery of materials and human resources to various Umbrella facilities.

Raccoon Forest Notes

Large Raccoon Forest lies on the northern outskirts of Raccoon City and includes the Arklay Mountains. It's a rich habitat, home to a multitude of the area's woodland creatures. The abundance of life in the forest is one contributing factor to the rapid widespread dispersion and mutation of the virus, resulting in a biohazard. The Arklay Research Facility and Management Training Facility both lie within the forest.

Reclamation Project Notes

The Management Training Facility has been abandoned since James Marcus's death in 1988. Umbrella undertook a project to reclaim the facility and bring it back under operation. Supplies and human resources were to be divided into two batches and sent in, but the lead group was exterminated by a B.O.W. The special forces unit sent in to investigate was also caught by surprise and taken down by the Leeches. The leaders of the Reclamation Project were Albert Wesker and William Birkin.

Keeper's Diary

May 9, 1998

Played poker tonight with Scott and Alias from Security, and Steve from Research. Steve was the big winner, but I think he was cheating. That scumbag.

May 10, 1998

One of the higher-ups assigned me to take care of a new creature. It looks like a skinned gorilla to me. I was instructed to feed it live animals.

When I threw in a pig, the creature seemed to play with it—tearing off the pig's legs and pulling out the guts before it actually started eating.

May 11, 1998

At around 5 A.M., Scott woke me up. Scared the shit out of me, too. He was wearing a protective suit. He handed me another one and told me to put it on. Said there'd been an accident in the basement lab. I just knew something like this would happen. Those bastards in Research never sleep, not even on holidays, so it was only a matter of time before one of them slipped up.

May 12, 1998

I've been wearing this damn space suit since yesterday. My skin's getting grimy and feels itchy all over. The goddamn dogs have been looking at me funny, so I decided not to feed them today. Screw 'em.

May 13, 1998

Went to the Infirmary because my back is all swollen and feels itchy. They put a big bandage on it and told me I didn't need to wear the suit anymore. All I wanna do is sleep.

May 14, 1998

Found a big blister on my foot this morning. I ended up dragging my foot all the way to the dogs' pen. They were quiet all day, which is weird. Then I realized some of them had escaped. Maybe this is their way of getting back at me for not feeding them the last three days. If anybody finds out, I'll have my head handed to me.

May 16, 1998

A rumor is going around that a researcher who tried to escape the estate last night was shot. My entire body feels hot and itchy and I'm sweating all the time now. I scratched the swelling on my arm and a piece of rotten flesh just dropped off. What the hell's happening to me?

May 19, 1998

Fever gone but itchy. Today hungry and eat doggie food.

May 21, 1998

Itchy itchy Scott came ugly face so killed him. Tasty.

Resident Evil

Summary

Resident Evil Digest 1

The S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team was sent in to ascertain the cause of the grisly murders taking place in the Arklay Mountains, but all contact with them was cut off during the mission.

Alpha Team was then sent in to investigate. While searching for their comrades, Alpha Team fell under attack by monsters and was forced to flee into an ominous mansion.

The survivors—Chris, Jill, Barry, and Wesker—resumed the search for Bravo Team, but found that most of them had already been killed by Zombies. The mansion was filled with trap doors and strange devices and teemed with monstrous dogs, crows, spiders, and blood-sucking plants. The mysteries surrounding the old residence became more apparent as the team fought their way through its evil inhabitants. The mansion turned out to be a front for a hidden Umbrella research facility. Alpha Team managed to locate the survivors of Bravo Team—Rebecca, Richard, and Enrico—but Richard perished shortly thereafter, and Enrico was murdered while trying to warn of a traitor in their midst.

Resident Evil Digest 2

Jill and Chris made their way below the mansion and discovered Umbrella's high-tech research facility.

They discovered Wesker in the cultivation chamber and learned that he was the traitor. As a former Umbrella researcher, he had seized the opportunity that the biohazard presented to lure them into the mansion and collect data on the effectiveness of the biological weaponry against highly trained soldiers. Wesker also had further plans to betray Umbrella.

With the awesome power of the completed Tyrant in his hands, he no longer needed to follow the orders of others. However, after the Tyrant was released, it lashed out and pierced Wesker's body with its giant claw.

The Tyrant pursued Jill and Chris, while in the background a self-destruction mechanism had been initialized. The pair made contact with Brad, Alpha's helicopter pilot, and fled to the helipad to escape.

The Tyrant followed in pursuit and began to draw closer with each step.

Arklay Research Facility "Mansion" Notes

Umbrella's research facility was built deep within Raccoon Forest. The primary facilities are buried deep underground, while the two-story mansion that rests aboveground serves as a facade. The mansion's construction includes a wide range of insidious traps and devices created by the architect, George Trevor.

Mail to the Chief of Security

CONFIDENTIAL

Attn: Chief of Security

Date: July 22, 1998, 2:13

X Day is drawing upon us. Execute the following procedures within one week. Prompt actions are demanded.

1. Lure S.T.A.R.S. to the estate, and obtain the B.O.W. raw combat data against S.T.A.R.S.
2. Collect two embryos of each mutated specimen as samples, excluding the Tyrant. Dispose of the Tyrant.
3. Ensure complete disposal of the Arklay Research Facility, including all personnel and test animals. Disguise their deaths as an accident.

When the above procedures are executed, report to headquarters for further instructions.

Sealed Letter to Sergei Vladimir

Dear Colonel,

It has been so long since we last met. Has summer come to Russia yet?

I realize it is sudden, but I have a request that only you can handle, old friend. You already know from the television conference the other day that a response to the incident at Arklay has been ordered.

The mail calling for the X Day Procedure has already been sent. There are stirrings behind closed doors calling for a "disposal" of the entire facility. However, I just cannot help but feel it is a waste, what with our guardian of Crete.

I apologize for having to make this request of you, but could you fly to Raccoon and recover the prototype for me? There is cause for the urgency of this request. Hidden forces are at work, trying to back me into a corner.

I suspect there is more to the virus outbreak and other various incidents than is suspected. The company has decided to destroy any evidence implicating their involvement. In the current circumstances, I fear that any correspondence sent by traditional means would be monitored, and so I sealed this message.

Umbrella is embroiled in a dangerous situation, and these are dangerous times. This is when those who would take advantage of such misfortune will begin to emerge. You have always been our loyal cleaner, and the time when your services are needed has come again.

Happy hunting.

Researcher's Letter

June 8th, 1998

My dearest Ada,

By the time you read this letter, I will no longer be the man you knew. The results of my test came back today, and as I suspected, they came back positive. I feel like I am teetering on the edge of sanity just thinking about my impending doom. I would give anything not to have to become one of them.

As far as I know, you are not infected. I sincerely hope things do not reach such a desperate pass, but if it has turned out that you are the last person remaining alive, I want you to get the material from the Visual Data Room. Then, activate the Self-Destruct System in the Power Room and escape from here. Please do everything in your power to make this whole incident public.

If everything is still running normally, you should be able to release all the locks using the Security System. I have set up the terminal in the small security room so that you can log in to the system using my name and your name as the password.

You will need another password to release the lock of the door in Basement Level Two where the Visual Data Room is located. As a safety measure I have coded that password into an X-ray picture; a roentgenogram. I know you, and I'm sure you will be able to work it out without any trouble.

There is just one more thing...and it is my last request. I hope you never have to lay eyes on me in that state, but if you do happen to run into me in my hideous form, I beg you to put me out of my misery. I hope you understand. Thank you, Ada.

Yours truly,

John

Resident Evil 2

Summary

Resident Evil 2 Digest 1

Two months after the mansion incident, Raccoon City has shown signs of changing. Leon S. Kennedy is R.P.D.'s newest police officer, and he has arrived in Raccoon City for his first day on the job.

The town is swarming with Zombies, and shortly after reaching town, Leon has to save Claire Redfield from an attacking Zombie.

Claire is S.T.A.R.S. team member Chris Redfield's younger sister, and she has come looking for her brother. Claire and Leon flee together to the safest location they can think of—the R.P.D. police station.

They manage to reach the station but find that the police force has already been devastated. The two decide to split up to try and look for survivors and an escape route. While exploring the expansive police station, Leon meets Ada Wong in the parking garage, and they continue exploring together. Meanwhile, Claire finds and rescues a young girl. She tells Claire that her name is Sherry and that she got separated from her parents. Leon finds that there is a sewer line linking the police station with an Umbrella research facility. What he did not yet realize was that there would be a powerful monster standing in between him and his escape.

Resident Evil 2 Digest 2

In the research facility, Claire ran into Annette, an Umbrella researcher and Sherry's mother. She gives Claire a full account of the causes leading to the outbreak in Raccoon City.

The monster called "G" that was in the sewers was really her husband, William, after he injected himself with an experimental virus called the G-virus. The outbreak of the T-virus sparked a battle for control of the new G-virus between William and Umbrella.

Leon had made his way to a different part of the research facility and was attacked by a Tyrant. During the fight, he leapt into danger and saved Ada from certain death. They continued through the facility together and a bond began to form between them. Ada finally revealed the truth to Leon that she was actually a spy sent in to steal the G-virus.

While Leon was with Ada, Claire was still with Annette, and G had appeared suddenly in front of the pair, cutting Annette down. She entrusts the instructions on producing the G-virus vaccine to Claire shortly before dying.

Sherry had become infected with the virus, and Claire hurried to produce the vaccine. Can Claire and Leon reunite and escape the disaster? What will become of the infected Sherry?

Raccoon City Notes

An industrialized city located in the American Midwest, Raccoon City is surrounded by nature, with an expansive forest to the north and plentiful fresh water supplies. Raccoon City boasts a population of 100,000 people, classifying it as a midsized city. The city successfully attracted investment from the multinational corporation Umbrella, and soon grew to become an industrialized company town with nearly a third of the population directly employed by Umbrella.

Reporter's Memo

At last! I have found the evidence I need to prove that the "cannibal disease" is indeed present in this city.

I've witnessed it with my own eyes! I saw one man actually eating another. He behaved like a savage beast, tearing flesh from bone. It was horrifying. I have heard rumors that numerous people now suffer from this disease. The cause, however, remains a mystery. I must look into this further The government has placed Raccoon City under martial law to prevent the spread of the disease. Due to this, I have lost contact with the media outside of the city. But I'm not giving up yet. As a journalist, I have a duty to the people and to my profession. From what I have gathered, the disease has not spread nationwide yet. It is my belief that this city holds the key to the creation of the disease and its cure.

The military has set up blockades around the city to keep people from escaping and spreading the disease. Most of the citizens of this once great city are now either dead or infected. I know that it is the right decision to quarantine the city, but I can't help but feel sorry for myself. Will I be infected or eaten? I suppose it doesn't matter. My fate has already been sealed. All I have left is my work. I won't give up until I solve the mystery of this deadly disease. I have already discovered that it is not an airborne strain but is spread by some other means.

Dario's Memo

I can't help but wonder if anyone will ever actually read these words, but writing them down helps me keep the last shred of sanity I still have left.

After I've become a meal for those undead monsters, I'm sure the G.I.s responsible for sealing off the town will have a good laugh if they discover this memo. Is this how it's supposed to end? I don't want to die. I'm not ready

My wife, daughter, mother My entire family has been killed. But none of that matters anymore. Right now, I have to worry about myself. That's all I have left. I never would have imagined my end to be like this. I had so much left to do. Rather than becoming a salesman, I should have tried my hand at being an author. That's what I always wanted to do, but my mother was less than supportive of my dream. Why did I ever listen to her?

This looks like the end for the great Dario Rosso, future best-selling author.

Chief's Diary

September 23rd

It's all over. Those imbeciles from Umbrella have finally done it Despite all their promises, they've ruined my beautiful city. Soon the streets will be infested with Zombies. I'm beginning to think that I may even be infected myself. If I am, I'll make sure I kill every last person in this town!

September 24th

I was successful in spreading confusion among the police as planned. I've made sure that no one from the outside will come to help.

With the delays in police action, no one will have the chance to escape my city alive. I've seen to it personally that all escape routes from inside the precinct have been cut off as well.

There are several survivors still attempting to escape through the lower levels, but I'll make sure no one gets out.

September 26th

I've had a change of plans about the remaining survivors inside the precinct. I've decided to hunt them down myself.

I shot Ed in the back less than an hour ago. I watched him writhe in pain upon the floor in a pool of his own blood. The expression on his face was positively exquisite. He died with his eyes wide open, staring up at me. It was beautiful.

I wonder if the mayor's daughter is still alive? I let her escape so I could enjoy hunting her down later I'm going to enjoy my new trophy. Frozen forever in the pose I choose to give her.

Resident Evil 3

Summary

Resident Evil 3 Digest 1

It was 1998, and signs of the coming fall were in the air of Raccoon City. Jill remained in the city to investigate Umbrella but did not realize the situation had become so dire.

Upon realizing the extent of the danger, she decided to escape. The virus had rapidly spread, and much of the town's population had already turned into Zombies. Umbrella sent in the Umbrella Biohazard Countermeasure Service (U.B.C.S.) under the guise of evacuating the survivors. One of the U.B.C.S. men was mercenary Carlos Oliveira. Jill and Carlos began to work together to try and escape the hell on earth Raccoon City had become. A black-coated monster stood between them and their freedom. Nemesis, or the Pursuer, was intent on wiping out every last member of S.T.A.R.S.

Nemesis had already made short work of Brad and continued to track Jill down to accomplish its mission objectives.

Resident Evil 3 Digest 2

The tenacious Nemesis was cutting down one U.B.C.S. soldier after another. Of course, a betrayer was also responsible for many of the U.B.C.S. losses. This betrayer was Nicholai Ginovaef, a member of the internal espionage group within Umbrella with special orders. He was planning to take back field combat data from the city to Umbrella, while betraying members of the U.B.C.S. for money. That is when Carlos Oliveira delivered the startling news. In a matter of hours, a missile that had been launched would annihilate all traces of Raccoon City.

There was not much time left and the Nemesis mutated to a more powerful form with each attack. Despite the desperation of the situation, Nicholai was only interested in the bounty placed on Jill's head. In the meantime, Jill and Carlos continued to look for a means of escaping the ill-fated town.

Attention

The Raccoon City project has been abandoned. Our political maneuvering in the Senate to delay their plans has failed. All supervisors should evacuate immediately. The U.S. Army is going to execute their plan tomorrow morning. The city will be obliterated at daybreak.

Eradication Operation Notes

Even after the mansion incident had ended, the "cannibal disease" (T-virus) had spread to Raccoon City, plunging it into a state of panic. The city was quarantined, while R.P.D. officers and U.B.C.S. soldiers attempted to rescue its citizens. The situation grew more and more desperate, and the possibility of the virus spreading beyond the quarantine was growing. The U.S. government was concerned and called a nationwide conference to discuss the next step. They formulated a plan for the complete eradication of the city. In compliance, on October 1st, 1998, the military launched a new type of strategic missile into the heart of the city. Raccoon City, with its 100,000 inhabitants, was forever wiped from the face of the earth.

Emergency Orders

As of 12 A.M. today, September 9th, 1998, in provision with Article 12 of the Internal Emergency Procedures, all equipment and personnel are now under the command of the Captain of the Guard, Sergei Vladimir. His orders are to be strictly obeyed. Any attempts to disobey orders will be punishable by death.

1. This vessel is to infiltrate Raccoon City and air-drop T1 into the R.P.D. police station to take care of any possible survivors.
2. The remaining Ts on board should be dropped in the P-12A Incinerator Facility. They will be able to respond to well-equipped and well-trained U.S. special forces in the area. We must make sure we take all necessary steps to clean them up.
3. After completing the preceding steps, this vessel is to retreat from Raccoon City airspace as quickly as possible. After releasing all of the Ts, there will be another piece of cargo to be transported. Details will follow later.

CHARACTER BACKGROUNDS

There are many characters to keep track of in the Resident Evil canon. Various factions include Umbrella Corporation, S.T.A.R.S., and the Raccoon Police Department.

Umbrella

Included here is pertinent information relating to both the key and supporting characters that fall either directly or indirectly under the large shadow of Umbrella.

Founders

Ozwell E. Spencer Profile

The founder of Umbrella Corporation, Ozwell E. Spencer, is a man of noble birth, and together with James Marcus and Edward Ashford, he discovered the Progenitor virus. To continue researching the virus as a potential biological weapon, the three created Umbrella Corporation as a front for their activities. Spencer mercilessly removed rival after rival, continuing to expand his own influence. With the completion of research on the T-virus, he seized full control of Umbrella. He never reveals himself or his true intentions even to officers of the company, leaving Spencer a figure shrouded in mystery.

James Marcus Profile

James Marcus was the first head of Umbrella's Management Training Facility. A founding member of Umbrella Corporation and one of the pioneers who discovered the Progenitor virus, he was so involved in his research that he began to use Umbrella employees as test subjects in his experiments. The number of sacrifices totaled nearly 20 people. Acting under special orders from Ozwell E. Spencer, Albert Wesker and William Birkin assassinated Dr. Marcus in 1988. However, 10 years after his death, he was mysteriously revived. To exact his revenge, he began secret activities with the goal of destroying not only Umbrella, but the entire world.

Notable Employees

Willaim Birkin Profile

A world-renowned scientist working for Umbrella, William Birkin is the primary figure responsible for the development of the G-virus. He was also a core component in continuing the research on the T-virus where Marcus left off. However, some unpleasantness arose between him and Umbrella, prompting him to approach the U.S. military. Umbrella responded by sending in their special forces.

Shortly before his death at their hands, he injected himself with the G-virus and transformed into a monster. He is survived by a daughter, Sherry, from his late wife, Annette.

Sergei Vladimir Profile

Sergei Vladimir is an officer in Umbrella. During his army days, he held the rank of colonel and is still called that on occasion as a nickname. He approached Umbrella after the fall of the Soviet Union, looking for work. He is involved in Tyrant research, and his experience in military affairs has made him instrumental in the founding of Umbrella's private militia, the Umbrella Biohazard Countermeasure Service (U.B.C.S.).

He shows an ardor for following Spencer's orders and makes sure even the most radical of Spencer's wishes are carried out.

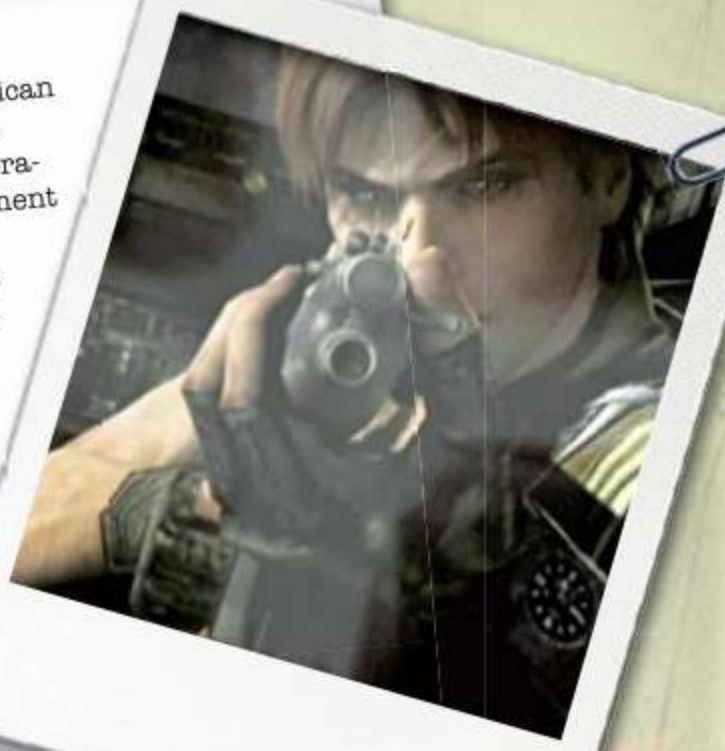
Hired Guns

Carlos Oliveira Profile

A young mercenary with Native American blood in his veins, Carlos Oliveira was active in anti-government guerilla operations in South America. After government forces wiped out his organization, he was scouted by Umbrella Corporation to join their U.B.C.S. special ops unit. He is an expert in heavy weaponry and vehicle operation, making him a valuable asset. He is warm-hearted and is known to joke around. Perhaps as a result of being raised amidst violence, he is brave and always willing to throw himself in the middle of danger.



HUNK Profile

HUNK has carried out a large number of successful operations, many of which he was the only one to return alive from, earning him the nickname "Grim Reaper." He is a member of Umbrella special forces and was the operative that single-handedly retrieved the G-virus despite the rest of his unit being wiped out by the G creature that used to be William Birkin. Cold, silent, and devoid of emotion, he is a human machine. He has never shown his true nature, and even his true face is unknown.

S.T.A.R.S.

S.T.A.R.S. Notes

Special Tactics and Rescue Service, or S.T.A.R.S., was established within the Raccoon Police Department and is divided into an Alpha Team and a Bravo Team. This elite group was formed to respond to terrorism, organized crime, and emergencies too difficult for the regular police force to handle. Its members include a hand-picked group of specialists, the best of the best. Their funding was provided by a grant from private corporations, most notably Umbrella Corporation.

Alpha Team

Barry Burton Profile

A member of S.T.A.R.S. Alpha Team, Barry Burton used to serve in the same military unit with Chris Redfield and employs his expert knowledge in firearms to adjust and supply the guns for the group. He is good-natured and compassionate, with a strong sense of duty. He deeply loves his wife, Kathy, and two daughters, Moira and Polly. After escaping from the mansion, he took his family to Canada and returned alone to Raccoon City to rescue his friend and former comrade from S.T.A.R.S.

Chris Redfield Profile

Chris Redfield is a member of the S.T.A.R.S. Alpha Team. His marksmanship is #1 amongst the sharpshooters assembled in Alpha. He was once a pilot in the U.S.A.F. and has been rigorously trained in hand-to-hand as well as knife combat. He has pursued Umbrella and the people behind it even after the fall of Raccoon City by helping to organize a private biohazard containment unit.

An excellent observer with keen insight, his sense of right and wrong is unwavering. This is often a source of conflict between Chris and his superiors. He has a younger sister, Claire, of whom he is very protective.

Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Jill Valentine Profile

Alpha Team's Jill Valentine is very dexterous and is an expert at picking locks, earning her the somewhat awkward title of "Master of Unlocking." She is not only highly skilled in bomb disposal, but is excellent at breaking down any situation and determining the best course of action. Her years of U.S. Army Delta Force training have helped make her a crack shot.

After the destruction of Raccoon City, both she and Chris have joined a private biohazard containment unit with the goal of taking Umbrella down once and for all. Serious, with a strong sense of justice, she's very direct in her actions. She typically shows only her tough side to others, but there are times when she lets her guard down and shows a softer side.

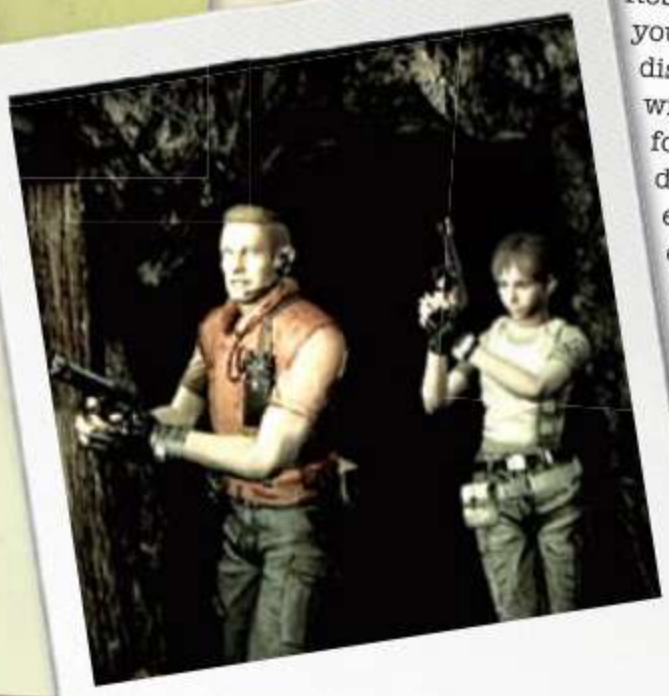
Brad Vickers Profile

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Alpha Team, Brad Vickers is in charge of chemical protection and also serves as the team's helicopter pilot. He is prone to cowardice, a trait most notably demonstrated when he fled and left his team for dead at the mansion. His guilty conscious eventually forced him to return to try and save the remaining survivors. Despite his one moment of courage, he could never change his true nature. In the end he was tracked down and killed by the Nemesis.

Bravo Team

Richard Aiken Profile

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team, Richard Aiken is the BUM, or back-up man, for the team and specializes in the shotgun. He is also charged with looking after the inexperienced Rebecca Chambers. This young man has a bright disposition and is frank with others. He cares for people and will do whatever it takes, even at the cost of his own life, to protect someone.



Protected by copyright. Unauthorized or unlawful copying or downloading expressly prohibited.

Rebecca Chambers Profile

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team, Rebecca is an expert in the manufacture and preparation of pharmaceuticals and serves as the team's medic. She is highly talented and graduated college at the young age of 18. Although she looks delicate, she is a woman of action and calm in the face of danger. She lacks experience in actual combat, so she can appear childish at times and can sometimes hesitate when finding herself overwhelmed by an unknown situation.

Edward Dewey Profile

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team, Edward Dewey is the RE, or rear security, for the team, and although he normally serves as the main pilot, he acted as copilot to Kevin Dooley for the Raccoon Forest mission. After the helicopter crash-landed, he discovered the Ecliptic Express and looked around inside, only to be bitten by a Zombie, making him the first S.T.A.R.S. victim.

Forest Speyer Profile

Forest Speyer is a member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team. His sharp-shooting skills almost rival Chris's. He escaped to the mansion but was attacked by a monster and left for dead on the balcony, where his body was later discovered.

Enrico Marini Profile

He is the leader of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team and second in command of S.T.A.R.S. Enrico is a veteran with survival skills and is highly regarded by his subordinates. Enrico's Bravo Team was on the way to investigate the bizarre murders in Raccoon Forest when their helicopter was forced to make an emergency landing. They proceeded to investigate on foot. Along the way, his team got split up and attacked by monsters in the forest. Enrico decided that Bravo Team's best chances of survival were with fleeing into the mansion, a secret Umbrella research facility. After escaping to the mansion, Enrico soon learned that there was a traitor within S.T.A.R.S.

Kenneth J. Sullivan Profile

A member of the S.T.A.R.S. Bravo Team, Kenneth J. Sullivan is a veteran who can be trusted to bring his vast experience and wisdom to his investigations. He is charged with recon and position security. He made it to the mansion but was soon overtaken and became a meal for a Zombie.

Richard Aiken's Letter

Dear Bridgette,

I understand your concerns about me taking up this dangerous line of work. As a member of S.T.A.R.S., I will always be in the line of fire. I figured this was as good a time as any to try and explain my actions. Bridgette, I know I've talked about her before, but the memory of my little sister eats at me from the inside. I couldn't save her from that criminal.

I know you tried to console me, telling me that there was nothing I could do being so young. But I was so paralyzed by fear and doubt that I couldn't do anything.

My baby sister was killed right in front of my very eyes and I couldn't move an inch. I couldn't protect her. I was so helpless. It feels like I should have died in her place and I just can't shake that feeling. All I can do is try to bury that feeling and protect the people that need it most, so they don't have to go through what I did. I'm not giving up this job, and I will continue to protect who I can.

S.T.A.R.S. is the only way I can live with myself. I don't want to die in vain. I never want to hesitate when that moment comes again.

Don't worry; I'm not that little kid anymore and I'll come back alive. I promise. You're the most important thing in my life, and I always want to be there for you when you need me.

Love,

Richard

Jill's Diary

August 7th

Two weeks have passed since that day. My physical wounds have healed, but I just can't forget that nightmare. For most people, it's history now. But for me, whenever I close my eyes, it all comes flooding back. Zombies eating people and the screams of my teammates dying. No, the wounds in my heart have yet to heal

August 13th

Chris has been causing a lot of trouble recently. What's with him? He seldom talks to the other police members and is constantly on edge. The other day, he punched Elran of the Juvenile Crime Department just for accidentally spilling coffee on him. I tried to approach him, but when he saw me he just gave me a wink and walked away. I wonder what's going on in that head of his

August 15th

At midnight, Chris, who has been on a leave of absence for a vacation, called me and asked me to meet him at his apartment. When I got there he showed me a couple of pieces of paper. They were part of a virus research report entitled simply "G." According to Chris, "the nightmare continues." He later went on to say that "it's not over yet." It appears that ever since that day at the mansion he has been fighting to uncover the truth all by himself, without rest and without even telling me.

August 24th

Chris left town today for Europe. Barry said that he was going to send his family to Canada first and then meet up with Chris after that. I have decided to remain in Raccoon City for the time being because I know that the research facility here will be vital to this case. After gathering as much information as I can, I will regroup with Barry and Chris in about a month. I know that is when my true struggle will begin . . .

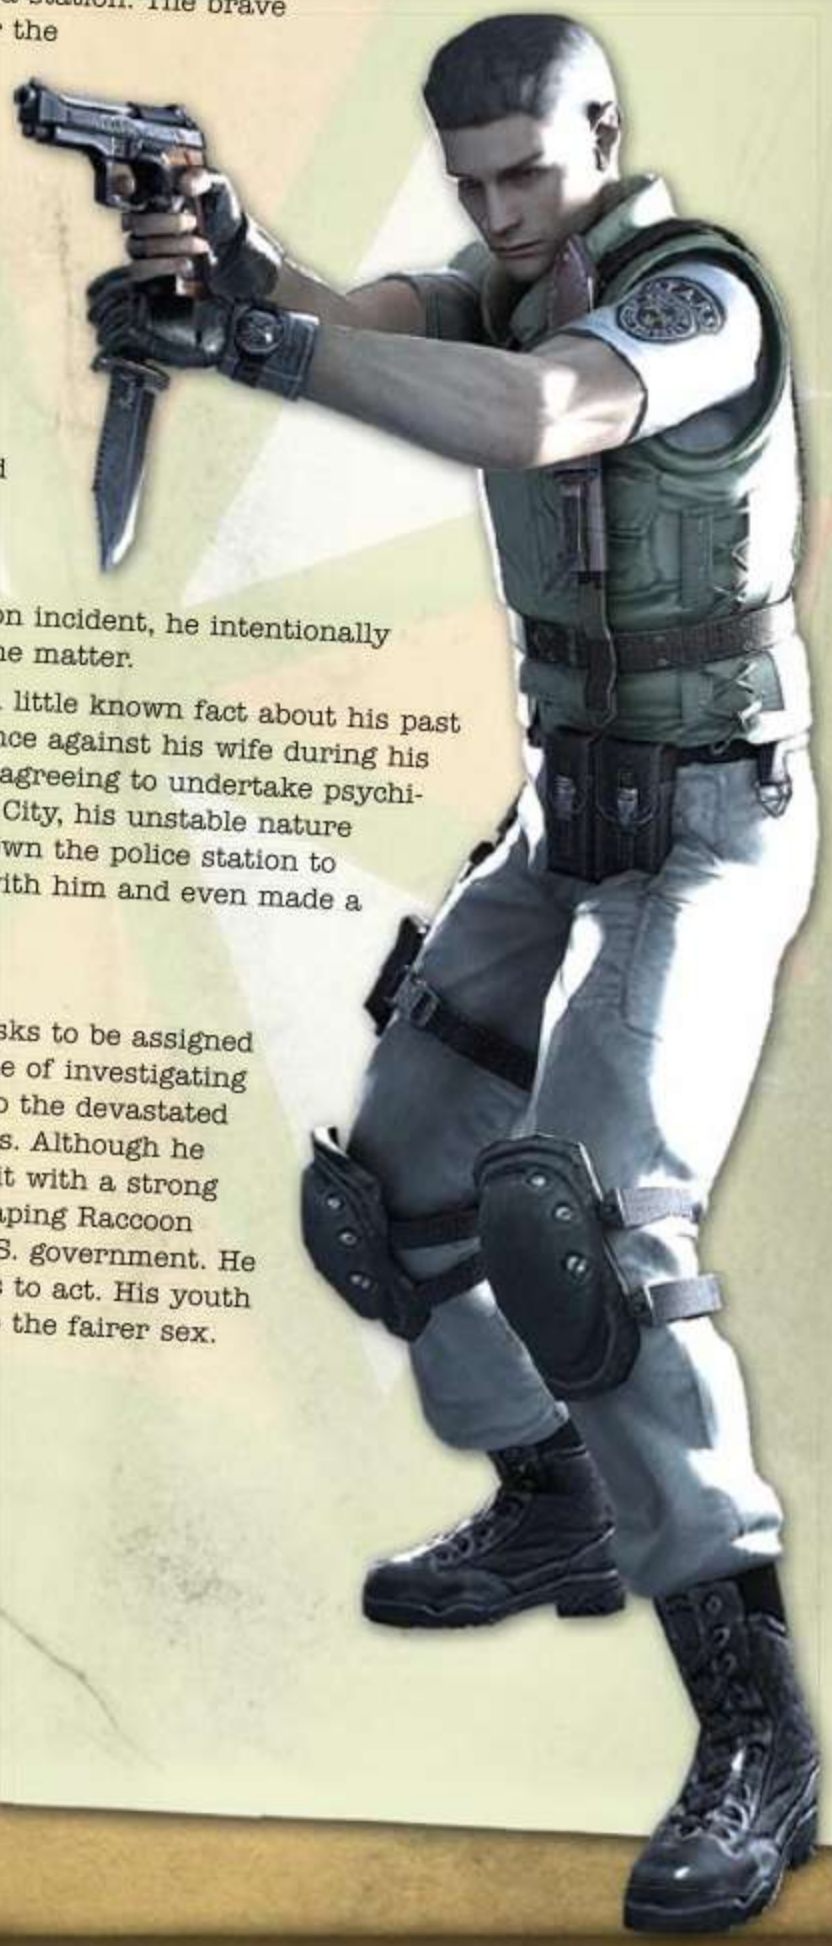
Raccoon Police Department

R.P.D. Notes

The Raccoon City's police department is led by Chief Brian Irons. Brian is deeply connected to Umbrella, who had been working with him behind the scenes. R.P.D. includes the special unit S.T.A.R.S. and is outfitted with far more technology than appropriate for such a small city thanks to generous donations from Umbrella. The police station itself was also filled with expensive art pieces and resembled a museum more than a station. The brave officers of the R.P.D. did what they could for the citizens of Raccoon City in the face of the spreading T-virus, but with their chief gone mad and giving them confusing orders, they could not pull it together and were eventually wiped out despite having some of the nation's finest.



Notable Employees

Brian Irons Background

The chief of police for the R.P.D., Brian Irons maintains the facade of being a warm-hearted police chief, but he was accepting bribes from Umbrella to turn a blind eye to their many illegal activities in the city. When members of S.T.A.R.S. returned with reports of the mansion incident, he intentionally blocked all further attempts at investigating the matter.

His dark side is not a recent phenomenon. A little known fact about his past is that he was twice accused of domestic violence against his wife during his college years, and he avoided incarceration by agreeing to undertake psychiatric evaluation. During the events in Raccoon City, his unstable nature began to rear its ugly head again. He locked down the police station to make sure all of his subordinates went down with him and even made a personal trophy of the mayor's dead daughter.

Leon S. Kennedy Profile

After graduating from the police academy, he asks to be assigned to the Raccoon City police, who are in the middle of investigating the bizarre murders in the area. Upon arrival to the devastated city, he does what he can to rescue the survivors. Although he has little practical experience, he makes up for it with a strong survival instinct and natural abilities. After escaping Raccoon City, he is scouted to become an agent for the U.S. government. He has a strong sense of justice and never hesitates to act. His youth can sometimes lead him astray when it comes to the fairer sex.

Mail to the Chief

To: Mr. Brian Irons,
Chief of the Raccoon City Police Dept.

We have lost the mansion due to the actions of a renegade operative, Albert Wesker. Fortunately, his interference will have no lasting repercussions upon our continued virus research. Our only present concern is the presence of the remaining S.T.A.R.S. members: Redfield, Valentine, Burton, Chambers, and Vickers.

If it comes to light that the S.T.A.R.S. have any evidence as to the activities of our research, dispose of them in such a manner that would appear to be purely accidental. Continue to monitor their progress and make certain their knowledge does not go public.

Annette will continue to be your contact throughout this affair.

William Birkin

To: Mr. Brian Irons,
Chief of the Raccoon City Police Dept.

I have deposited the amount of US$10,000 into the account for your services this term as per our agreement. The development of the G-virus, scheduled to replace the T-virus, is near completion.

Once it is completed, I am certain that I will be appointed to the executive board of Umbrella Corp. It is imperative that we proceed with extreme caution. Redfield and the remaining S.T.A.R.S. members are still attempting to uncover information on the project.

Continue to monitor their activities and block all attempts to investigate the underground research facilities.

William Birkin

To: Mr. Brian Irons,
Chief of the Raccoon City Police Dept.

We have a problem. I have received information informing me that Umbrella HQ has sent spies to recover my research on the G-virus. There are an unknown number of agents involved. They must not be allowed to take this project away from me as it represents my entire life's work. Search the city thoroughly for any suspicious persons. Detain any such individuals by whatever means deemed necessary and contact me immediately through Annette. With these precautions, any possible threat should be eliminated.

I will not allow anyone to steal my work on the G-virus. Not even Umbrella . . .

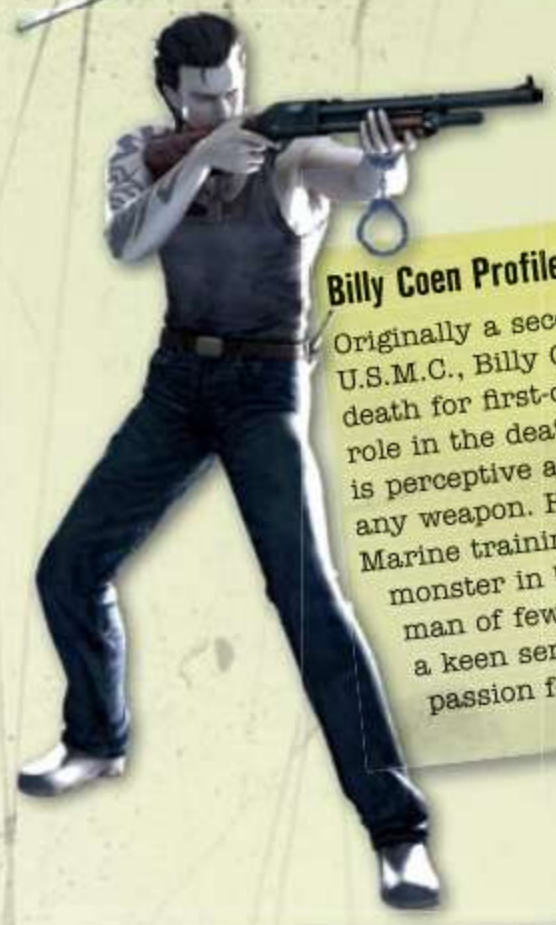
Other Key Characters



Billy Coen Profile

Originally a second lieutenant in the U.S.M.C., Billy Coen was sentenced to death for first-degree murder for his role in the deaths of 23 people. Billy is perceptive and can expertly handle any weapon. His body, hardened by Marine training, is a match for any monster in battle. He is a cynical man of few words, but he possesses a keen sense of justice and a deep passion for his duty.

Albert Wesker Profile

One of the men behind the biohazard outbreak, and always seen with his signature shades on, Albert Wesker possesses knowledge about biological engineering and used to be an agent for Umbrella. He was planted in S.T.A.R.S. to spy on the agents and was even made their commanding officer.

Wesker took particular note of Chris and his combat prowess while in charge of the team. He is cold-blooded and has no qualms about betraying the people who place their faith in him. He betrayed and killed Marcus, lured the S.T.A.R.S. teams into the mansion and nearly wiped them out, and even pretended to be dead to join Umbrella's rival company.

Wesker was the one who sent Ada Wong to retrieve the G-virus and was involved in the incidents at Rockfort Island. He appears intent on gathering as much data as possible on viral weaponry. Since injecting himself with a virus during the events at the mansion, his power has grown far beyond that of a normal human being.

Ada Wong Profile

Ada Wong is a woman shrouded in mystery. She tells Leon that she has come to Raccoon City looking for her lover, but this is only cover. She is actually a spy who has come to retrieve a sample of the G-virus. She has undergone rigorous special training in firearms and acrobatics, making her a real pro. Ada is always calm and collected even in the most extreme circumstances.

She is cold and mysterious, but can show a feminine side from time to time. Whether she truly cares about anyone else or is just using her charms to manipulate people is never clear. Who is the real Ada Wong? Nobody knows.

Memo about Billy's Past

Tragedy rocks the U.S. Marine Corps! A dark day in Africa

Rumors surround Dunell Marine Base, situated in the American heartland. These rumors were sparked by the U.N. condemnation of the Guerilla Cleanup Operation in Africa.

A nonprofit organization has disclosed that the execution of 23 alleged soldiers was actually the slaughter of 23 innocent local inhabitants. The military has retracted its initial statements about the operation, and the world is in an uproar over its involvement in the affair. An investigative committee has been quickly assembled to look into the incident, and the results of the inquiry are disturbing.

They have announced that the truth of the matter is that one Marine panicked under the extreme conditions and unintentionally killed the civilians. This Marine is said to be currently being held under close medical supervision and will receive just punishment in full accordance with the law. Details on the individual remain undisclosed at this time.

The military's reluctance to disclose information has only fueled media claims of a coverup. Should the top brass be allowed to shirk responsibility for a soldier in their command massacring 23 innocent people? Does this cold-blooded killing machine of a Marine even exist? This would not be the first time the military kept information on an operation quiet, but the emergence of a single soldier to blame seems all too convenient and reeks of conspiracy.

If they do not disclose the full truth behind the incident, there is no foundation for regaining the trust of the citizens they are supposed to protect. The military will not be able to escape the suspicions of the people, nor of the family of the soldier implicated in this sad affair.

Dunell Marine Base continues to deny media access to the facility, while soldiers continue their drills as if nothing has happened. Where is the justice? Is this what our America has become? We all want to believe that our brave, shining knights in the U.S. military have our best interests at heart, so we can only hope and wait for an appropriate response to the public's outrage.

UMBRELLA CORPORATION

Many memos, diaries, letters, and other correspondence have surfaced since the fall of Umbrella. Included in this section are some of the most useful, from a researcher's perspective.

Memo on the Founding of Umbrella

(extracted from the Umbrella Archives)

Introduction

Umbrella was founded in 1963 by three partners—myself, my good friend Edward Ashford, and preeminent virology expert Dr. James Marcus.

We all shared a common goal from the outset. We believed that virus research would play an important role in improving people's health. One day, it would even help to build a society free from the ills of disease.

The Umbrella logo is a symbol of our unwavering pledge: preserving the health of the people. Technology is the umbrella that will serve that purpose. Thanks to everyone's support, our company has grown and the Umbrella logo is recognized and trusted throughout the world. For 40 years, we have followed our principles and delivered safety and peace of mind to medical facilities and homes.

I would like to thank our loyal shareholders, employees, and customers for their invaluable contributions to our continuing success. Unfortunately, both Edward and James have passed on in the course of this last year. While I mourn their loss, I feel their shining example lives on in the work we do every day. I know they would be proud if they could see Umbrella now.

We at Umbrella will continue to do our best to spur new innovation and make the world a better place for everyone. Humanity's future is safe under our umbrella.

We appreciate your continued support.

Umbrella Corporation Founder,

Ozwell E. Spencer

U.B.C.S. Notes

The Umbrella Biohazard Countermeasure Service, or U.B.C.S., is a private military group operated by Umbrella. U.B.C.S. exists primarily to control the disasters caused by Umbrella's products and is always first on the scene of any accident. Because of the dangerous nature of this work, many of the members are war criminals, refugees, or others recruited with the promise of being pardoned from death sentences or life imprisonment. These soldiers often come from the armies of communist countries and possess a solid military background.

Monitor Notes

Monitor is an internal espionage organization within Umbrella set up to monitor suspicious activity among its employees. Operatives are usually placed throughout the organization and maintain the image of normal employees to help them conduct their activities. There were several placed among the U.B.C.S., one of whom was Nicholai Ginovaef. Their orders range from spying on fellow employees and destroying evidence to cleanup operations, including assassinations as required. The rewards for successful operations far outweigh the risks, and monitors feel no remorse for selling out or killing their supposed comrades. Rumors are that Colonel Sergei Vladimir is the one pulling the strings behind the group.

Umbrella Special Forces

This elite special forces unit is owned and operated by Umbrella. It reports directly to the highest ranking officers in Umbrella. Unlike the U.B.C.S., which performs more visible missions such as rescuing civilians, this unit maintains total secrecy and a small size. Delta Team was sent in to blow up the Ecliptic Express after the trouble occurred, but it were overwhelmed by the Leeches and wiped out. One of the unit's more notable members, HUNK, belongs to the Alpha Team and carried out the impossible mission of retrieving the G-virus from the research facility under Raccoon City.

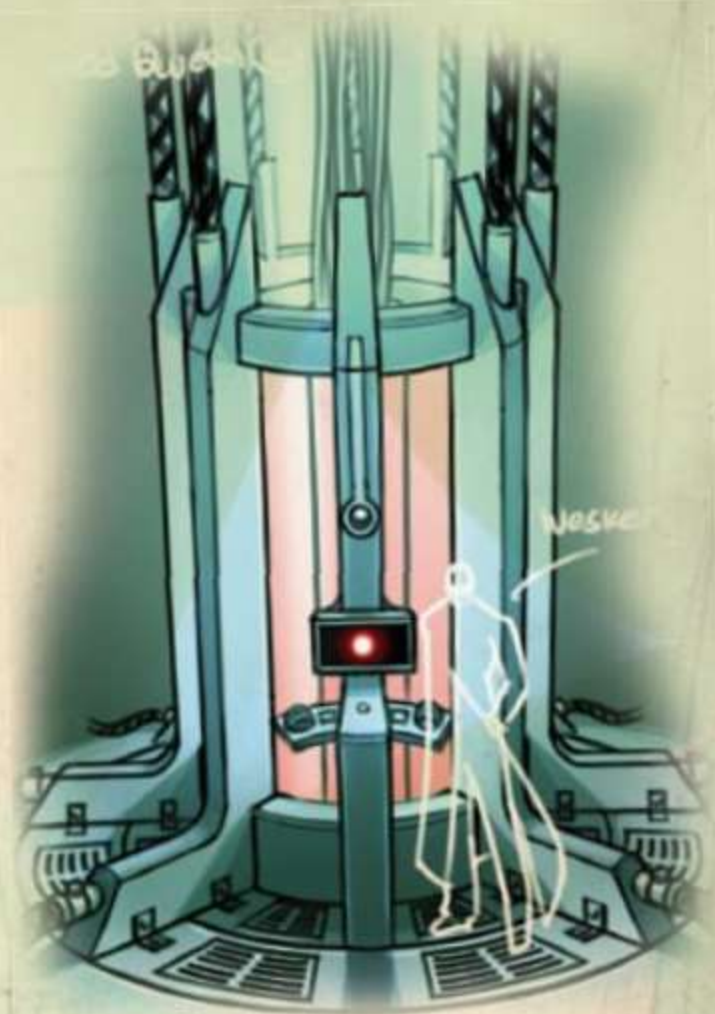
Red Queen Notes

Red Queen is the code name for the AI defense system developed by Umbrella. The AI is contained within U.M.F.-013. However, the AI has unrestricted access to the entire Umbrella network for administration, monitoring, and carrying out certain procedures. This additional functionality is a security fail-safe, but in most circumstances, Red Queen is in the background performing only its primary monitoring function. In emergencies, it will serve a more active role and protect sensitive systems and data from intrusion along with cleaning up hostiles. It is self-aware and can take these measures based on its own judgment.



U.M.F.-13

The 13th-generation supercomputer U.M.F.-13 is contained in the underground Raccoon City research facility shelter. All of the data gathered from the network of Umbrella's branches around the world is stored as a backup on this mainframe. This wealth of information is kept in one location to serve as a safety measure should Umbrella run into difficulty and need to be reestablished.

Marcus's Diary 1

December 4th

We finally did it—the new virus! We call it Progenitor. I will begin detailed investigations into this virus immediately.

March 23rd

Spencer says he's going to start a company. Well, I don't care, as long as I can continue my research into Progenitor. He can do whatever he likes

August 19th

Spencer keeps hassling me to become the director of his new training facility. Maybe it's due to the business, but he's becoming intolerably pushy. Perhaps I can turn this to my advantage. I need a special facility to properly explore all of the secrets of this virus. A place where no one will get in the way

November 30th

Damn that Spencer! He came to complain to me again today. He thinks of Progenitor as nothing more than a money-spinning tool. Fool! But if his influence continues to growit can only be bad for my research. If I'm to properly develop Progenitor, I must strengthen my own position too.

September 19th

At last I've discovered a way to build a new virus type with Progenitor as a base. Mixing it with Leech DNA was the breakthrough I needed. I call this new virus T, and it marks the first successful derivation of the Progenitor line.

October 23rd

It's no good! I can't hope for progress by experimenting on mere rodents. Only humans can be a proper mammalian subject for these experiments. Otherwise, I'll never make any real progress

November 15th

Someone seems to suspect something about my experiments, but perhaps it's just my imagination. Well, if anyone does get too close, they may find themselves unexpectedly "assisting" in my research!

January 13th

At last, they are ready. My wonderful Leeches! Those of low intelligence will never have the privilege of tasting this sense of joy and satisfaction! Now, finally, I can move against Spencer. Soon, I will control everything

January 31st

The devices I set to protect my work have been disturbed. It appears someone came looking for T and the Leeches. Fool. No doubt the work of Spencer's group.

February 11th

Today, I again found evidence of tampering around the entrance to the labs. If that's what they're after, I must find a suitable way to deal with them. Perhaps I should have William and Albert smoke out the pests Those two are the only ones I trust. Apart from my beloved Leeches, of course. But Spencer It wouldn't end there, would it?

Umbrella Russian Branch Notes

This branch of Umbrella is a research lab located in the Caucasus region, in the south of Russia. On the surface, it appears to be a government-operated chemical processing plant, but it has been taken over by Umbrella after the fall of the Soviet Union and maintained as a front. Umbrella built facilities beneath the surface to perform viral and B.O.W. research. It is Umbrella's newest base and serves as Sergei Vladimir's headquarters.

Umbrella Raccoon City Judgment

After the Raccoon City incident, the U.S. government issued an order for Umbrella to cease and desist all operations. In response, Ozwell E. Spencer hired the best lawyers money could buy and prepared false witnesses to try and create the appearance of a conspiracy with which to turn the public opinion away from Umbrella and toward the government. Survivors of the incident presented their testimonies, but the lack of evidence, most of which had been wiped out in the eradication operation, and the withholding of testimony by government employees, who feared being implicated, made the case drag on without a conclusion.

Letter from Sergei to Nicholai

Nicholai, I apologize for the delay in responding. Your offer definitely has the potential to turn quite a profit. However, the price I had to pay was high and had to be considered carefully.

I have not changed my mind about relinquishing them. I understand that these ten soldiers I've fought alongside with are nothing more than a number, a price tag, to Umbrella.

I'm sure you are finding this all quite amusing, Silver Fox, but this is a sad day for me. I feared the day I would have to make this decision. After all, these men were all raised by me and are a part of me. I can't help but feel reservations about turning these thinking, feeling human beings into biological weapons and cursing them to an eternity of living death. However, I have made my decision and will not waver. Progress is always built on sacrifice. If we are to truly restore our Mother into the great country she once was, I am willing to endure any amount of suffering, and a price in blood is still a small price to pay. If I have to cut down my very body, it is a sacrifice I am willing to make. I will wail and shed tears of blood and rend every last flesh of regret from my body if it means I can usher in a new age. My answer, comrade, is yes. Silver Fox, your wish shall be granted.

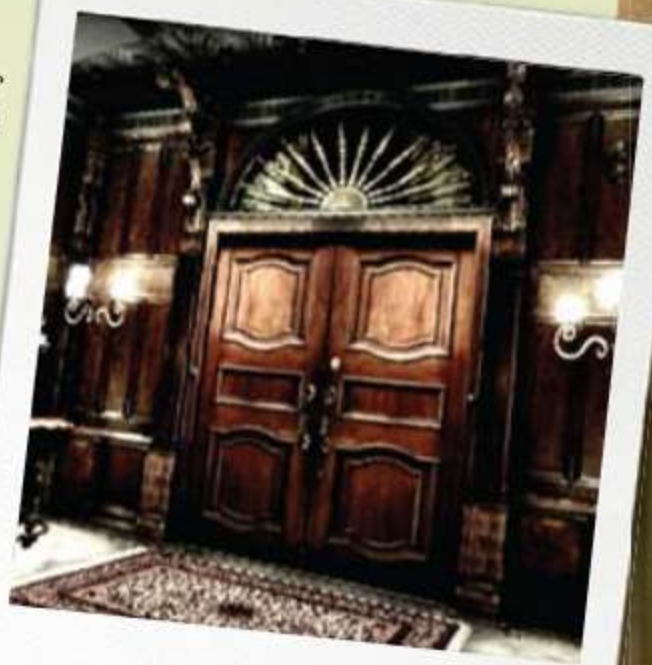
Online Interview with Anti-Umbrella Activist (Sara Brighton)

Reporter: The trial is the talk of the Internet, and queries on popular search engines continue to make the top three list. However, there are many who raise their eyebrows at your battle against the multinational corporation as carrying things too far. What is your opinion on this?

Sara: Umbrella is not just another out-for-profit corporation; they are a powerful organization closely resembling an army or a country. We have no choice but to wage war this way on a company trying to cover up the truth. We have battled in court for almost half a decade now to reach a verdict against Umbrella, and we would do it again if given the choice.



Reporter: So you're the David fighting the Goliath of Umbrella. However, now that a decision has been handed down, the problem's solved, right?

Sara: One problem was solved, but some doubt still remains, and I feel it's too early to celebrate our victory.

Reporter: Doubt? And what doubt would that be?

Sara: There are two questions we need to ask ourselves. First, why is it that it has taken so long for evidence against Umbrella to appear? Why now? Second, why is the nature of that evidence still being concealed to this day?

Reporter: There are a lot of popular theories flying around about that one.

Sara: Take a look at the court records. It seems as if the evidence was data being stored on a computer. Umbrella must have been hiding it right to the very end. The most likely reason none of this evidence has gone public is that it contains information that would incriminate many world governments, including our own. This evidence is also rumored to have been acquired from dealings with an anti-social organization.

Reporter: But Umbrella's gone. Certainly that means the biggest menace is out of the way, right?

Sara: Have the wrongdoings of Umbrella come to light? Certainly. But all of the data on virus production and biological weaponry has not. I don't feel the data has been erased, but that it has ended up in someone's hands, someone who will inherit Umbrella's dark legacy.

Reporter: Inheriting a dark legacy? That sounds like something out of a TV show.

Sara: It's easy to laugh and dismiss it as some movie-of-the-week story. However, if there is any chance that such a possibility is true, it is worth our concern. Humans can be foolish creatures. Even after witnessing the destructive might that wiped out an entire city, someone could still steal that power and try to use it to further their own ambitions, regardless of the price to be paid. Umbrella may only be the beginning of this nightmare. The mystery surrounding the court decision makes that much pretty obvious.

THE INFECTED

Umbrella's experiments with the Progenitor virus and later the T- and G-viruses created many genetic aberrations, mutants, and abominations. From intentionally designed bio-organic weapons (B.O.W.s) to creatures secondarily infected with the virus, the Umbrella product line is both wide and deep. Here are profiles of each creature, as well as miscellaneous files documenting some of the more unsettling events in the history of Umbrella's experimentation.

Encountered

B.O.W. Notes

A bio-organic weapon, or B.O.W., is an organism mutated using the power of the T-virus developed by Umbrella. There are numerous varieties of B.O.W.s, all developed to accomplish different aims, from combat to viral contamination. Widely considered the most successful of the B.O.W.s is the humanoid Tyrant. B.O.W.s include all organic weapons intentionally designed by Umbrella, but do not include monsters created as a result of secondary infection by the T-virus.

Adder Notes

This small, venomous snake was secondarily infected by the T-virus, leading to a mutation with an enhanced ability to attack prey. It has the ability to multiply with incredible speed, and its already-potent venom has been further enhanced by the effects of the virus. The Adder's bite also carries with it the potential to further spread the T-virus.

Bat Notes

Secondarily infected with the T-virus, which gives it heightened aggressiveness, the Bat has a tendency to lunge at humans when it detects them. Its physical features are not much different from those of other bats that live in Raccoon Forest, but its hostile behavior increases the chance of spreading the T-virus.

Black Tiger Notes

The Black Tiger is a disposed-of Web Spinner that mutated and grew even larger and more deadly. It can be differentiated from a Web Spinner by the black markings on its body. Its ability to create a web and nest has returned, providing it with an additional tool for trapping large prey.

Cerberus Notes

The Cerberus is a B.O.W. created by administering the T-virus to large Dobermans used in the military. Its skin is severely decayed, although its speed and endurance are considerably heightened. When it finds its prey, it will coordinate with others in its pack and attack in waves. They are suspected to be the main cause of the numerous mutilated bodies found in Raccoon Forest.

Chimera Notes

This grotesque B.O.W. was created by combining the genes of a human being with those of a fly. Although the Chimera's general shape is humanoid, it has retained many fly characteristics, such as the ability to crawl on walls and its sharp appendages. Its intelligence is on par with that of an insect, and its body contains within it numerous maggots. Its appearance provokes fear in humans.

Crimson Head Notes

The Crimson Head is a Zombie that has undergone a sudden mutation, bringing with it a ferociousness surpassing that of a standard Zombie. The mutation process requires that the Zombie first be incapacitated. At this time, the creature's body tissue is reconstructed at the cellular level, resulting in renewed activity as well as the tell-tale reddish color that gives the Crimson Head its name. It possesses long, sharp claws and relentlessly pursues victims with a speed unseen in other Zombies.

Crow Notes

Wild Crows were infected by the T-virus. Although their appearance remains mostly unaltered by the infection, they have grown more violent and are no longer frightened off by loud sounds. The fact that they are capable of flight makes them an extremely dangerous carrier for the virus.

Eliminator Notes

The Eliminator is a biological weapon created from a large monkey by Dr. James Marcus. Because it's based on a primate, the creature is highly intelligent and capable of executing commands. In response to the virus, the Eliminator's muscle tissue strengthens and swells to such an extent as to tear through its skin.

When the Eliminator detects prey, hunger drives it to jump and viciously attack with incredible speed.

Grave Digger Notes

An arthropod that has mutated to an enormous size as a side-effect from the T-virus, the Grave Digger burrows beneath the ground until it senses prey, at which point it will rush up to the surface to take it by surprise. The Grave Digger maintains the appearance of a worm and can grow to 10 meters in length. Its powerful jaws can chew through even concrete, and its amazing digestive system allows it to swallow a human victim whole.

Hunter Notes

The Hunter was a battle B.O.W. born from a fertilized human egg infused with reptilian DNA with the assistance of the T-virus. It is extremely deadly in combat and possesses large, sharp claws. It is intelligent enough to carry out basic commands and can cut down prey with astonishing agility and jumping power, making it truly deserving of the name Hunter.

Infected Bat Notes

The Infected Bat is a creature that shows distinct mutations over other bat subjects. It is a prime example of the T-virus increasing the size of a highly compatible mammal. Its extraordinarily developed physique can reach a wingspan of up to three meters, and its strengthened muscle tissue enables it to carry a human being with ease. Its diet has been altered and now consists primarily of meat. In order to capture its prey, it signals accomplices to its aid with sonic waves.

Ivan Notes

Ivan is a derivation of the T-103 Tyrant line that Sergei has re-engineered to act as his personal bodyguard. Its basic combat functionality is that of a T-103, but it has been modified to better assimilate into human society. In addition to the trademark T-103 defensive coat, this model is also equipped with sunglasses that include a head-mounted display. Major improvements with this model include greater powers of comprehension and the ability to pass as human. It is still a T-103 and, as such, can transform into a Super Tyrant when the situation calls for it.

Ivy Notes

Officially named Plant 43, this B.O.W. was developed by analyzing data from Plant 42, which had appeared in the mansion. It inherits the blood-sucking capabilities of Plant 42, while demonstrating new traits such as the ability to move on its own and attacking prey with its two vine-like appendages. It also has the ability to spit digestive enzymes from its flower-like head section to deliver a fatal blow to prey. Its movements are plodding, most likely due to the slow hydraulic forces it employs for locomotion.

Large Roach Notes

These were normal roaches that lived in the sewers until becoming infected with the T-virus and growing to 40 centimeters, or eight times their normal size. Their natural hardiness has remained intact, helping their population to explode. They have a tendency to bite soft flesh on their prey, and on humans, this tends to be the area around the carotid artery. There have even been reports of attacks on humans where groups of the cockroaches have leapt to their victim's face, suffocating them with numbers. They fought with mutated rats for control of the sewers and won. Since then, they have demonstrated a tendency toward cannibalism.

Leech Notes

The bloodsucking Leech is approximately 20 centimeters in length. Bred by Dr. Marcus, this creature has evolved in ways previously unthinkable in an annelid. When multiple Leeches are present, they have been observed to form a collective consciousness. They consume flesh by attaching their enlarged mouths to prey and possess the ability to entirely consume a human in a matter of minutes.

Licker Notes

These creatures used to be Zombies before the T-virus further ravaged their bodies. They were named "Lickers" because of the incredibly long tongues they possessed. Other changes involve the brain expanding to the point of becoming visible and their skin deteriorating and peeling to expose their deformed muscle structure. This last mutation makes it easiest for them to move around on all fours and allows them to climb on walls and ceilings. Physically, they far outperform Zombies, and they can hunt their prey by sound, lashing out to attack with their piercing tongues. They can also employ their sharp claws to leap and attack.

Lisa Trevor Profile

Lisa Trevor was imprisoned for nearly 30 years in the mansion and subjected to continual experiments that transfigured her into a monster. Numerous viral experiments made her immune to death itself and soon led Birkin to the discovery of the G-virus. Lisa has the disturbing habit of peeling faces from her victims and placing them over her own. There were repeated attempts to dispose of her, but they all failed. She was eventually bound and left to wander the halls of the mansion.

Mimicry Marcus Notes

This creature is actually composed of countless Leeches that have merged together to imitate the late Dr. James Marcus. The Leeches secrete an adhesive bodily fluid over their cuticle in order to mold together. This coating hardens as they fuse together. When in the presence of prey or a threat, the Leeches will break their form and attack. They are a revolting but powerful enemy.

Nemesis T-type (Pursuer) Notes

This B.O.W. is the result of combining a Nemesis parasite with a host Tyrant body. The introduced Nemesis parasite controls the host completely. Its improved intelligence gives it the capacity to follow orders as well as the ability to operate a variety of weaponry. A protective coat was wrapped around it to provide protection against bullets and explosions as well as to act as a fail-safe should it go out of control. Thanks to the parasite's secretions, the regenerative powers of the Nemesis T-Type were incredible. Even if it were somehow stopped by an attack, it could mutate and evolve into a new form capable of withstanding further attacks. The new forms and their abilities are completely unpredictable.

Neptune

A new form of B.O.W. created from a great white shark base, Neptune was developed as an experiment to prove that the T-virus would combine well with sea creatures. However, the introduction of the T-virus provided only minimal enhancement to the pre-existing strength of the shark, and the result can hardly be employed as a true B.O.W. In the sea, it knows no enemies, but on land, it is powerless.

Plant 42 Notes

Plant 42 was created accidentally during the T-virus outbreak. Researchers who had discovered the plant studied it with great interest as its growth overwhelmed that of other plants. Although it cannot move its trunk, it can lash out with tentacle-like appendages to ensnare prey and drain them of their blood for nutrients. It has also generated many other self-defense mechanisms to protect itself from would-be attackers.

Queen Leech Notes

This creature has mutated to become the Queen Leech that controls all Leeches. It typically takes the form of Dr. James Marcus but can break this mold to become a transfigured, first form. The Queen Leech first entered the remains of Dr. Marcus many years ago and merged with his DNA. Over a long incubation period the Queen Leech eventually began thinking and acting just like Dr. Marcus did when he was alive. As the name Queen Leech implies, it commands countless mutated Leeches. If it senses bodily harm, it will cease restraining its natural functions and mutate into a larger, second form.

Sergei Monster Notes

Sergei transformed into this monster after injecting himself with a virus. The tentacles binding his arms fuse into one large tentacle. At the end of this appendage is a dangerous claw that can be used for movement or attacking.

Stinger Notes

The Stinger is a B.O.W. created by administering the T-virus to a scorpion. As a result of the virus, the creature rapidly grows to a massive size, and its pincers become powerful enough to cut through steel. The increased thickness and strength of the exoskeleton enable it to absorb damage from firearms. However, the creature's slow movement prevents its effective usage as a B.O.W. in the field.

T-A.L.O.S. Notes

Codename T-A.L.O.S. The "T" stands for Tyrant, and the rest of the codename stands for Armored Lethal Organic System. This bioweapon uses a Tyrant as a base, while adding remote computer control capabilities via a chip implanted in the brain. Its cardiovascular system is artificially improved to give it mobility unthinkable in a natural organism. Its body is armored in a special metallic alloy that not only helps it defend itself from missiles and other projectile fire, but also restrains runaway T-virus mutation. It has also been equipped with weaponry to allow it to respond to distant targets. Although it is a humanoid B.O.W., it has enough armor and firepower to stand against a tank. The codename also represents the name of a bronze giant from Greek mythology.

Tyrant (T-002) Notes

The Tyrant is a product of the Arklay Research Facility—the ultimate life-form, based on the male human body structure. Its combat prowess is the best of all B.O.W.s, and it is named after the virus that created it. It possesses the mental faculties to carry out orders and is extremely durable. There were still issues about the control mechanisms, so combat data against real opponents was needed for making further improvements. If it senses that its life is in danger, it will remove its power limiter and transform into the even more powerful Super Tyrant.

Wasp Notes

These Wasps were secondarily infected after ingesting insect carriers of the T-virus. They have grown to enormous size as a result. Wasps are societal insects that congregate in nests, and though it may be possible to fend off one or two, any unfortunate victim of their attack will likely fall prey to a large number of the creatures when they attack in swarms.

Their stinger can deliver large doses of their natural venom mixed with the T-virus.

Web Spinner Notes

The Web Spinner is a new B.O.W. developed from early experiments with arthropods. Its name is derived from the creature's roots as a spider, but the mutated creature now uses its acidic venom to capture prey and no longer relies on webs. With its spider ability to climb on walls and ceilings, it was under consideration as a useful weapon, but the inability to exert control over it ended that line of research.

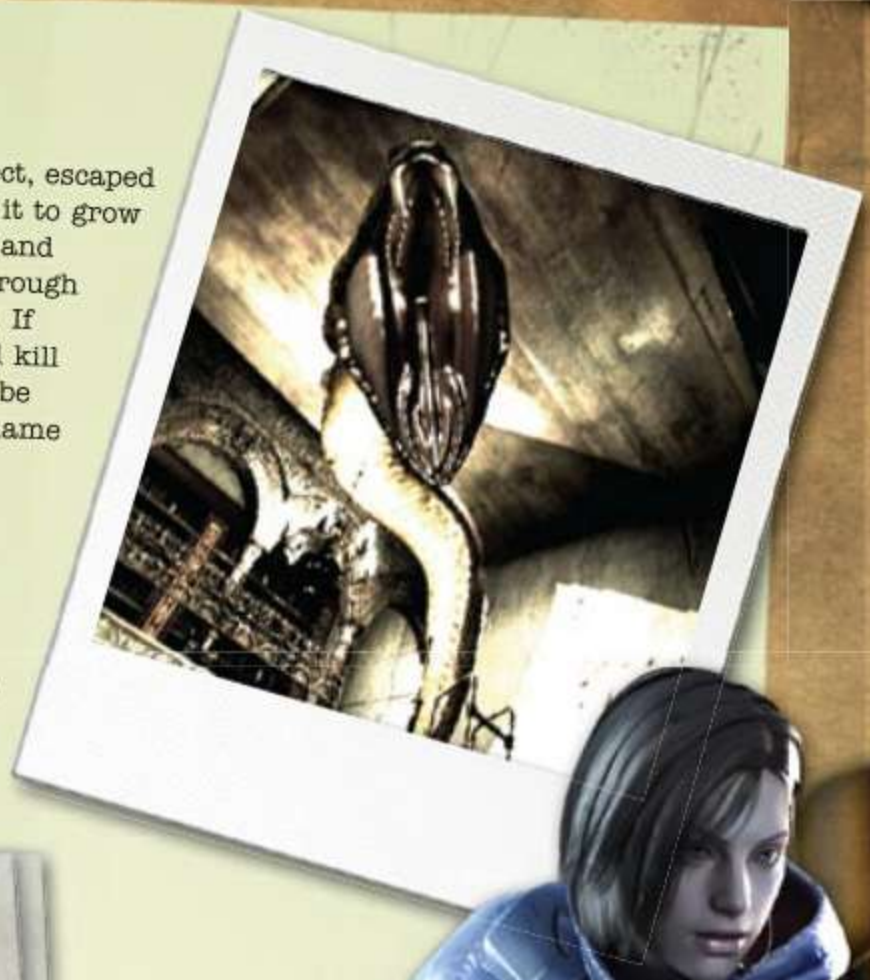
Yawn Notes

This poisonous snake, bred for use as a B.O.W. test subject, escaped and was subsequently infected with the T-virus, causing it to grow to a gigantic size. It quickly made the mansion its home and ate many of the research staff. The venom it secretes through its sharp fangs requires a powerful serum to counteract. If the victim is not given prompt treatment, the venom will kill the victim in a matter of minutes. Because it appears to be yawning as it swallows its prey whole, it was given the name Yawn.

Zombie Notes

Zombies were once human, but were infected with and consequently resurrected by the T-virus. They lose their ability to reason, which, combined with the continued decay of their flesh, has led to their being called Zombies. They began to appear in great numbers with the T-virus outbreak. Their insatiable hunger drives these carriers to seek out living organisms for food, which only further serves to spread the infection.



The Trevor Family

Trevor Family Notes

George Trevor was the brilliant architect who designed and oversaw the construction of the Arklay mansion. The construction of the mansion took five years, and when it was complete, Spencer decided that George knew too much. He was imprisoned within the mansion, while his wife, Jessica, and daughter, Lisa, were subjected to viral experiments. Jessica was deemed incompatible and disposed of, while George found himself trapped in the product of his own design. The Trevor family became the first victims of Spencer's blind ambition.

Someone's Journal

I feel dizzy after that shot they gave me. I don't see Mom. Where did they take her? She promised that we would escape together. Did she escape alone and leave me behind?

Nov. 15, 1967

I found Mom. We ate together. I was very happy. But she was a fake. Not my real Mom. Same face but different inside. Have to find Mom. Have to give face back to mother. I got Mom's face back. Nobody can have my Mom except me. I attach her face to me so she doesn't go away. Because Mom sad when I meet her without her face.

Mom where? I mis you

A Letter to Someone

To my Lisa,

Day by day I can feel my consciousness drifting further away.

The shots given to me by the men in white clothes made some of Mommy's itching go away. Today they gave me another shot saying it was "nutrition." When they give me the shots Mommy can think straight, but Mommy's shocked and sad because Mommy is unable to think of you all the time.

Mommy's afraid. Afraid of forgetting everything, especially the memories of you and Daddy What your faces look like, how we used to be together They're all starting to disappear into somewhere dark in my mind.

Oh Lisa, I wish I could touch your face and hold you in my arms right now, so that I can hold on to the wonderful memories of you and Daddy.

Lisa, we can't stay here any longer. We have to escape! Listen to me, Lisa. Our chance to escape is the next time when we go to that lab together. We'll both pretend that we are unconscious, and when that man in white clothes is off guard that will be our chance. When we're on the outside, let's look for Daddy together. Okay sweetie?

Be strong, Lisa.

Wesker Report Extract on "Her"

July 31, 1978

We knew nothing about her. She was the biggest secret at the laboratory and her data was never removed from the premises. The records showed that she had been there ever since the institute was established. She was 25 years old. No one knew who she was or why she was there. Apparently, she was a human specimen to develop the T-virus on.

The experiment began on November 10th, 1967. She had been continuing to receive virus injections for 11 years.

July 27, 1981

He worked through the night at the lab time after time and repeated disorganized experiments, one after another. My staff and I collected biopsy samples as quickly as possible before the specimens could die, but we couldn't keep up with his speed.

The Laboratory Manager supplied the new specimens as if nothing had happened, but they didn't survive long. It was hell. But the female specimen survived that hell.

She was 28 years old by then and had spent 14 years in this lab.

The numerous injections of the "Progenitor" virus she had received over the past 14 years would have left her bereft of any logical reasoning. It's just as well because if she still had any mind left, death would have been the one and only thing she would desire.

Somehow, she continued to live.

July 31st, 1995

Her termination was decided on after three researchers had become her victims. With the study of the G-virus on track, she no longer had her status as a valuable specimen.

The termination of her vital signs was monitored and confirmed over the next three days. Then, the body was finally taken away to some unknown location at the instruction of the Laboratory Manager. Even now, I still do not know who she was or why she was brought here.

Leech Growth Records

February 3rd, 1978

I administrated Progenitor to four Leeches. Their will to survive leads them first to parasitism and predation. Then they breed and multiply. Such a single-minded biology makes them attractive candidates for bio-weapons research. Although they appeared to writhe around in pain at first, they soon settled down. Afterward, no major changes were observed.

February 10th, 1978

It has been seven days since the administration of Progenitor. There has been rapid growth to double their former size, and signs of transformation are emerging. Spawning has also been successful. They doubled their numbers in only an hour, but their ravenous appetites led them to cannibalism. I hastened to increase the food supply, but had already lost two of them.

March 7th, 1978

I provided them with live food, but lost half when the live food fought back. However, the Leeches are learning from experience and are beginning to exhibit group attack behavior. They are also ceasing cannibalism. Their evolution is exceeding expectations.

April 22nd, 1978

The Leeches no longer exhibit individual behavior, even when not feeding. They move as a collective. They consume everything I offer with remarkable efficiency.

April 30th, 1978

An employee has stumbled onto my experiments. Can a human be a food source? How will the Leeches respond?

June 3rd, 1978

A day worthy of commemoration. Today they began to mimic me! Surely they recognize their father Wonderful children. No one will take you away.

Talos Project Proposal

Next-Generation B.O.W. Proposal

Arklay B.O.W. Research Team

The success of the T-002 Tyrant experiment has shown us that progress towards a marketable humanoid B.O.W. is moving along nicely. However, we must strive to continue the research and development of cutting-edge products to satisfy the varying needs of our clients.

The plan our team proposes is as follows.

1. Tuning Control Synapse Connector

The current risk with deployment of T-virus based weaponry is the lack of control. Sudden cellular mutations can result in the halting of functionality, impairment of judgment, and the various other conditions reported in the past. In order to enable the safe transport and deployment of this weaponry, a more stable solution is essential.

Our 6th Research Lab in Europe has discovered one method of control by using organic parasites. We would like to pursue a more consistent result by using chip connections to brain cells. We are in the final stages of testing and feel confident in the likelihood of product realization.

2. Enhancement of Combat Functionality for Land-Based Weaponry

The Tyrant boasts a combat prowess and survivability that far surpasses that of even the best-trained combat troops. However, it is still only theoretically capable of successfully deterring roughly one military division. When facing armored fighting vehicles or military-grade helicopters, its kill ratio begins to falter.

By arming the Tyrant with specialized combat firepower and armor, we will make it more fit for the variety of situations it is likely to face in the field. In the past, the ideal has been to leave the Tyrant unhindered by additional equipment so that it can maximize its two strong points—motor performance and response reflexes. However, the use of enhanced armor modules, internal reinforcement implants, long-distance homing weaponry, etc. could preserve the natural abilities of the Tyrant while maximizing its options in field maneuvers. The potential for this enhancement is fast becoming a reality. When complete, it could make the Tyrant the ultimate all-in-one combat package.

Wesker Report Extract on the Tyrant Plan

We tried to create a highly sophisticated "Fighting Biological Weapon"—with intelligence—that would obey programmed orders and act as a soldier. We called it "The Tyrant." But from the beginning there was one huge obstacle—it was almost impossible to obtain a living subject on which we could base the Tyrant. The supply of genetically adaptable human beings for the Tyrant was extremely limited.

This is due to the nature of the T-virus. The T-virus variant that was ideal to create the Zombies and the Hunters was suitable for most humans, but it had a fault of making the carrier's brain cells decline.

To transform the carrier into a Tyrant we needed to keep the carrier's intelligence at a certain level. In order to overcome this issue, Birkin had been working on extracting a variant that would cause the least damage to the brain when it was adapted perfectly to the carrier.

However, humans with a genetic match to this variant were extremely rare. The Genetic Analytic team's simulation report told us that only one in ten million would be infected and transform into a Tyrant, with the remainder becoming Zombies.

It might have been possible to develop a more progressive strain of the T-virus that could transform more humans into Tyrants. However, to push the research further, first of all we required human subjects with a perfect genetic match to the new variant.

There was little possibility that such a specimen would be supplied to us, because even if we scoured the whole U.S.A., we would only be able to find 50 or so of them. In fact, at that time, even with the utmost effort we only managed to collect a few specimens with a close match. Even from the outset, our research was at a standstill.

Wesker's Notes on Differing Mutations

I have a theory on Sergei's unique course of evolution. I had always assumed that the variety of effects the virus brings about on its host were mere random mutations. However, witnessing first-hand the effects on Sergei combined with what I know of Marcus's transformation points to a common thread between their outcomes.

The host's mindset appears to influence the evolution of the virus. Sergei mutated into a monster whose very body is the picture of suffering as he was ripped apart from the inside by thorns. I can only imagine that his transformation represents the true mindset of the person he was inside. While I have no proof, my intuition tells me that this must be the case. If the personality of the host can truly affect the course of the virus manifestation, where does that leave me?

Virus Memo

We go way back, so I hope you forgive me cutting the formalities. I don't have much time. I must describe how to use the item in question.

The sample you have been given is from one of the mutation stocks. It possesses a unique characteristic. It should be injected into the host at least five minutes before needed. The results are almost immediate, but they do require a few minutes to completely take effect.

Even in death, as long as some portion of the host remains, the virus can reconstruct the rest and bring it back to life. During this process, there is a brief period where the host appears, for all intents and purposes, dead.

In experiments with animals, 70 percent of the subjects grew more powerful as a result of this resurrection. Their muscular and circulatory systems far exceeded those they possessed in life. This virus has been designed to conquer death. Twenty percent came back to life, but with none of the beneficial side effects present in the primary group. The remaining 10 percent remained dead.

In other words, there was a 90 percent revival rate. The virus has not been used on a human yet, but that is soon to change.

I'm not sure how this will help, but I'm sure you will put it to good use! Good luck.

G Notes

1. This virus is far more powerful than the T-virus and was developed by a researcher named William Birkin. The T-virus only causes one generation of mutations, but the G-virus can continue beyond one generation. When the Nemesis prototype was used on the test subject Lisa Trevor, her body served as the source of the original G-virus's discovery.

2. William injected himself with the G-virus and transformed into this monster. This monster is also called "G," but to help distinguish its name from the virus, the monster is sometimes called "Birkin G." This monster underwent extreme mutations until eventually reaching a fifth form, when it was finally destroyed by Leon and Claire in the research facility under Raccoon City.

Operation Report

Operation Report

September 27th 1:00 P.M.

The west barricade has been compromised and another exchange ensued. We sheltered the injured in the confiscation room on the first floor temporarily. Twelve more people were injured in the battle.

Recorder: David Ford

Additional Report

Three additional people were killed following the sudden appearance of an unknown creature. This creature is identified by missing patches of skin and razor-like claws. However, its most distinguishing characteristic is its lance-like tongue, capable of impaling a person in an instant. Their numbers as well as their locations remain unknown. We have tentatively named this creature the "Licker" and are currently in the process of developing countermeasures to deal with this new threat.
